

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION

THIS book has been prepared to satisfy the demand of many teachers that the Latin be made, at the beginning, a living subject for the student; and that the ability to compose and think in Latin be developed, along with translating and the acquiring of grammatical principles.

Its present form is due to a close observation of the needs of the student as determined by the actual use of these lessons in the class-room in years past, and to the uniformly resulting increase in enthusiasm, thoroughness, and amount of work done by the student.

To master the Latin, the Latin itself must be used. To the English student the theory must be presented in English, but the class-room practice may be largely in Latin, and thus the student will become familiar with the language by using it in thought and speech. To bring the student to this familiar use of the Latin the following plan is pursued.

First: Immediately after the text, the meaning of the Latin words, as they occur in the order of the text, is given in English, and the student is required to give both the English equivalent for the Latin and the Latin for the English as pronounced by the teacher. Each vocabulary contains an entirely new set of words. It is expected that the pupil will thoroughly master the words of each lesson, so that he will recognize them as they occur again and again in the text. This saves the time of the student—so often wasted in repeatedly looking up the same word—strengthens the memory, cultivates the attention, and secures accurate knowledge. The general vocabulary at the end of the book should be unnecessary, except, perhaps, for words which rarely occur.

Second: The study of the composition of Latin words is early introduced and persistently continued. The derivation of English words from the Latin is considered of such great importance that a call for such derivative words is affixed to each vocabulary.

Third: The text of the first twenty-nine chapters of Caesar's Gallic War (up to the end of the Helvetian War) is used as presenting a model of perfect Latinity, sufficiently simple in form and structure for the beginner. It affords an illustration of the most important principles of the language, and prepares the student for a further study of Caesar. After thoroughly learning the words and translating into English, the student is advised to memorize the text for a few lessons, for the purpose of securing a model for the order of words as well as fixing the pronunciation. This may not be deemed advisable by all teachers; but it is earnestly urged, as essential to entire thoroughness, that the student become so familiar with the text that he can give the English for the Latin or the Latin for the English when pronounced by the teacher. The text of the twenty-nine chapters, given connectedly after the lessons, will be found convenient for reviews.

Fourth: For the convenience of teachers, and to give definite direction to the student's work, the substance of the text is given in short portions in dictation exercises,—the student being required to translate orally as pronounced by the teacher. This gives opportunity to vary forms and constructions, fixes the meaning of words, and insures familiarity with the text. The matter given in these exercises can easily be modified and extended at the pleasure of the instructor.

Fifth: The same text is used as the basis for English sentences to be written in Latin. While the thought of the passage is retained in these sentences, their structure is so varied from the original as to afford thorough grammatical drill. No new words are introduced in this exercise, that no time may be lost in looking them up. This abundant practice, with Caesarian models fresh in the mind of the student, produces readiness in Latin composition and a correct style.

Sixth: The text is treated a fourth time in questions in Latin to be answered in Latin by the student. These questions, sometimes grammatical, sometimes on the facts of the passage under discussion, promote that mastery of the language which is to be attained only by its use in this way. These questions are suggestive, and the teacher can vary them and increase their number, so as to give a large part of the instruction in this form if he desires.

Seventh: Paradigms of declensions and conjugations with the principles of syntax are introduced gradually, after the student has acquired words and sentences illustrating these forms and principles. The book is complete without a grammar, but references are continually made to the leading grammars, and the student is encouraged to study by subjects from illustrative examples. Each principle is explained but once, and when illustrations of the same fact appear, reference is made by figures to the first example and explanation. The explanations of the text and of grammatical principles are given in notes in connection with each lesson. These notes are to be thoroughly learned and recited, to insure thoroughness and prevent waste of time in frequently referring to the same subject.

No apology is offered for the use of words and terms in the colloquial exercises which are not found in classical authors, but only in grammars and commentaries. The use of such words and terms is necessary to conversation in Latin, and a knowledge of the later Latin is to be desired rather than to be avoided.

The authors desire to acknowledge their indebtedness to those who have kindly assisted them by reviewing the work and offering suggestions. Special thanks are due to Professors S. C. Derby of the Ohio State University; M. L. Fox, of the Chicago Manual Training School; Ernest Sicard, of the Chicago High Schools; W. W. Troup, of Carthage College; J. D. S. Riggs, of Granville Academy, O.; and the late M. M. Fisher, D. D., LL. D., of the University of Missouri.

The favorable reception of this book by so many teachers, in the first year of its publication, and their co-operation in furnishing corrections for succeeding issues, calls for grateful recognition on the part of the authors. The statement of Conditional Sentences (General and Future) and of cum clauses has been modified in accordance with the treatment of Professor W. G. Hale in his Cornell University Studies in Philology.

INTRODUCTION TO THE REVISED EDITION

The hearty welcome accorded to Bellum Helveticum upon its first publication in 1889 and the results obtained from its widely increased use in succeeding years have demonstrated the correctness and value of its methods. The present revision seeks to embody more completely and clearly the principles commended in the 'Introduction' and in the remarks 'To Teachers.'

Additional aid has been given to enable students, immature in years or preparation, to proceed with greater facility and pleasure in the mastery of the difficult beginnings of the Latin tongue. The importance of the methods explained in the 'Introduction' and remarks 'To Teachers' is emphasized by their renewed insertion. Each division in all the lessons with the Vocabulary, text and Appendix, has been subjected to a careful review.

The following are some of the more important features of this revision:

Shortening of many of the lessons.

Conformation of all the lessons to the same general form.

Exhibition of all the grammatical forms in the body of the successive lessons.

Additional notes, references, and practice exercises for all difficult constructions, especially for Indirect Discourse.

Insertion of maps and illustrative cuts of weapons and armor.

The text carefully revised, made consistent throughout, and distinguished in the lessons by more prominent type.

Marking of all long vowels.

Additions in the vocabularies of definitions and of words helpful in conversational exercises.

A more perfect presentation of the principles of syntax in the Appendix, making it more complete as an elementary grammar for the first year in Latin.

Many teachers have co-operated in the revision by their suggestions on the general plan and on special passages. For this valued service the authors make grateful acknowledgment.

Dr. W. G. Hale has urged the marking of all long vowels as necessary to ensure a correct pronunciation without expenditure of time. Professor G. W. Barber has placed at our disposal his valuable Latin charts and read the proofs of the book. Professor Geo. E. Mellor has made valuable suggestions on the presentation of the verb. The earlier part of the proof has been read by Professor Omar Wilson, Butler University, Ind.; Mr. George M. Davison, Seattle High School, Wash.; Miss Alice E. Brown, Lafayette High School, Ind.; Miss Arletta Warren, Aurora High School, Ill.; Principal C. T. Meredith, Union High School, Azusa, Cal. Professor Hiram H. Bice of the St. Joseph (Mo.) High School has read the entire proofs, and in the conversational exercises we have had the benefit of the practical and thorough scholarship of Professor Arcade Mogyorossy, of Philadelphia, editor of Tusculum. It is believed that the result of these joint labors is a nearer approach to the ideal Latin book for beginners.

TO TEACHERS

The lessons are intended to be studied in the order in which they occur, and in general it will be well to follow the order of the divisions as laid down. Explain in advance how the lesson should be studied, and direct the student's attention to the special points to be considered.

Insist from the beginning upon a correct pronunciation, and secure a ready and intelligent reading of the Latin text.

Require a thorough mastery of the vocabularies, and of each form and principle as taken up, and then review, re-view, REVIEW. Besides a daily review, have a general examination as often as once a month. In daily review much of the work may be done rapidly by the class in concert.

In the recitation of the lesson,—

1. Pronounce the words in the vocabularies, and require the pupil to give not only the English definitions but also Latin equivalent as the corresponding English is pronounced. If there are English derivatives, or nearly synonymous Latin words, let them be given in connection with each new word.

2. After translation (see 6. below) and the recitation of any memorized passages, break up the text of the lesson into short passages, and let the pupil answer as the words are pronounced by the teacher. This exercise should be mainly English into Latin, using the exercise presented in the lesson, or abridging, extending or otherwise varying it, so that the pupil will have such a complete knowledge of the text that he will promptly render English into Latin or Latin into English as soon as the words of either language are pronounced.

3. The writing of the prescribed sentences, both in an exercise book and on the blackboard, should be required throughout all the lessons.

4. The exercise for questioning in Latin, like the dictation exercise, is intended to be suggestive, and can easily be varied and amplified. This is a most inspiring as well as a most profitable exercise. The Glossary furnishes terms necessary for its extension.

5. The principles and facts of the notes should be thoroughly learned and recited. Although frequent references are made to the same principle, it should not be necessary for the student to occupy his time in turning to the first explanation.

6. In translating, the student should be taught to ascertain the thought in the Latin order, and first translate the words literally, just as they stand in the text, noting the grammatical form of each word and all its possible constructions. Thus, His rebus adducti et auctoritate Orgetorigis permoti, constituērunt ea quae ad proficiendum pertinērent comparāre, etc., should come to the mind in the order of the original: "By these things led and by the influence of Orgetorig thoroughly roused, they determined, those things which to departing pertained, to prepare." An excellent exercise for training the student to use the Latin order and prevent his picking out words in the attempt to find an English order, is to take a sentence (the teacher giving the meaning of the first form of unfamiliar words) and write it on the blackboard one word at a time, calling upon the student to give the meaning, word by word, as the sentence progresses. Here the student should be taught to think of the possible constructions of each word and to anticipate the following words, and yet reserve his decision until the end of the sentence is reached.* After the thought has been ascertained in the Latin order, and it is desired to translate into English, teachers should insist that good idiomatic English be used and purely Latin idioms avoided. Thus the frequent use of the perfect passive participle in Latin is not to be imitated in English, but an active participle, or more frequently a clause, should be used instead; the Subjunctive must be rendered more frequently by the indicative or infinitive than by the potential, the auxiliaries of the potential are to be employed in the translation of possum and licet. A translation that fails to transfer the Latin idioms into good idiomatic English is but half a translation. The student's knowledge of his own language and his further mastery of it demand that all translations shall be made in the purest idiomatic English. A translation is by no means always necessary, as the teacher can easily judge whether the pupil has an intelligent grasp of the author's meaning, by the manner in which the Latin is read, and by questions in Latin on syntax and subject matter. And he can generally make the subject clear to the student by a proper reading of the text and explanation in Latin; provided, of course, that the student is familiar with the forms and meanings of the words.

*This method is explained and illustrated in Professor W. G. Hale's pamphlet, "The Art of Reading Latin," published by Ginn & Co., in 1887; and there are valuable suggestions in the same line in the article "On Reading Latin" in "Allen's Latin Method," copyrighted by the same firm in 1876.

The division into lessons has been made, largely, in reference to convenience in dividing the text or in the presentation of a subject with a general average of ten new words daily. As a rule, this number, with the related facts, can be readily and thoroughly learned. However, no rule in regard to the length of lessons can be absolute, except the imperative one that it be so measured to the capabilities of the class as to insure its complete mastery. With favorable circumstances, the work here laid down has been completed in two-thirds of a college year. The mastery of the contents of this book, however, represents a considerably greater knowledge of the language than is usually acquired in one year, and so much time should be taken, if necessary, to assure its thorough completion.

CAESAR AND THE HELVETIAN WAR

The name of Caius Julius Caesar has been called the greatest in history. He was Rome's greatest general. He laid the foundation of an empire which ruled the world for centuries, and from which have sprung, in a large degree, the modern nations of Europe. Although continually occupied with war and politics, he was also great in literature. We possess his two most important works, the "Commentaries on the Gallic War," which describe the conquest of Gaul, and the "Commentaries on the Civil War," which record his struggles with Pompey. The style of his works is characterized by great simplicity, conciseness, and vigor. Written also in the purest Latin, they furnish excellent models for the study of the language.

When Caesar was forty-two years old,—that is, in the year 58 B. C.,—he set out for Gaul, ostensibly for the purpose of protecting Roman territory, but as the event showed, for the subjugation of the land. In nine years he subdued the whole of Gaul, and converted it into a Roman province. In the campaigns of these nine years he disciplined and attached to himself an army which afterward made him the master of Rome. The first Gallic people which Caesar encountered were the Helvetii, the inhabitants of modern Switzerland. The Helvetii thought their country was too small, and besides were harassed by the neighboring tribes of Germany, and so resolved to seek wider limits and a more peaceful home to the west, on the borders of the ocean. Before leaving their country they provided themselves plentifully with provisions, and burned all their houses, some four hundred villages and twelve walled towns. By appointment they met at the southern point of Lake Geneva. There they assembled in the spring of 58 B. C., to the number of three hundred and sixty-eight thousand, of whom ninety-two thousand were men-at-arms. Under modern civilization, the same country now supports a population of two millions eight hundred and fifty thousand.

At Lake Geneva the Helvetii found their advance opposed by Caesar. Their most natural course was to cross the Rhone, passing through a corner of the Roman province in south-eastern Gaul. They sent a deputation asking permission to pass through the province without damage. To gain time, Caesar put them off to a second conference, spent the interval in constructing a line of fortifications along the Rhone, and then formally forbade their passage.

After vainly endeavoring to force a passage of the Rhone, the Helvetii, by arrangement with the Sequani, their neighbors on the northwest, proceeded to cross the Saone instead of the Rhone and thence to march westward. Caesar added five fresh legions to the four already at his disposal, and after about three-fourths of the Helvetian troops had crossed the Saone, fell upon and cut to pieces the remainder. Efforts on the part of the Helvetii to procure terms of peace satisfactory to themselves proved unavailing, and after some minor contests, the final decisive battle was fought at the Aeduan town, Bibracte, now Autun. Caesar acknowledges that the battle was closely contested and for a long time doubtful, but in the end Roman arms and discipline won a victory that ended all the hopes of the Helvetii. At the command of Caesar they returned to their desolated homes, but with the loss of more than two-thirds of their entire number. Remains of skeletons, ornaments, and arms have been unearthed on the field of the great battle near Autun.

ABBREVIATIONS AND REFERENCES

THE lessons are indicated by Roman, and the notes by Arabic characters; thus, XIII., 1. = Lesson thirteen, note one. Rem. = remark; thus, III., rem. = lesson three, remark. The figures 1, 2, 4, placed after the verbs, denote the conjugation; thus, portō(1) = portō, first conjugation. App. is for the Appendix; A. for Allen and Greenough's Revised Latin Grammar; G. for Gildersleeve's Latin Grammar; H. for Harkness's Standard Latin Grammar; P. for Andrew's and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, revised by Preble. BELLUM HELVETICUM

INTRODUCTORY LESSON

Note. It is assumed that the student knows the names and significance of the parts of speech, their forms, case, number, mode, etc., in his own language. Such knowledge of the English language is essential in beginning the study of Latin. The study of English grammar, however, may be pursued profitably in connection with the Latin and the mutual relation of the two languages made clearer by such comparative study.

I. The Latin Language. The Latin language, the language of the ancient Romans, derives its name from the Latini, or Latins, who once inhabited Latium in Italy. The modern languages of Italy, France, Spain, and Portugal are mainly derived from the Latin, and about sixty per cent of the words of the English tongue have a similar origin.

II. The Alphabet. The alphabet is the same as the English excepting j, v, and w. J was introduced in the seventeenth century to represent consonant i, but the more common usage is to employ i both as vowel and consonant. The Romans employed v and u, without distinction, both as vowel and consonant. Modern editors generally confine v to the consonant use, employing u only as a vowel. K was early supplanted by c and is seldom employed: y and z were only used in foreign words, especially to represent the Greek v and z. The vowels are a, e, i, o, u, y. The diphthongs (double sounds) are ae, au, ei, eu, oe, ui. The principal divisions of the consonants are mutes (voiceless or explosive sounds), liquids (flowing sounds, l, m, n, r), sibilants (s, z), double consonants (x (cs) z (ds)), semi-vowels (i, v).

Of the mutes,

the labials (lip sounds), are p, b, f (ph), v;

the palatals (palate sounds) are c (k), q, g, ch;

the linguals or dentals (tongue or teeth sounds) are t, d, th. A. 1-4

G. 1-7; H. 2-4; P. 14.

III. Pronunciation. The pronunciation of Latin varies in different countries. In America the methods most commonly employed are the Roman and the English. At present the Roman method is more largely followed, while the English method is retained by those who desire to give special prominence to the principles of English pronunciation and to the derivation of English words from the Latin.

IV. The Roman Method. By the Roman method every letter has always the same sound, as follows:

Vowels: ā as in father; a as in idea.
ē " they; e " net.
ī " machine; i " bodily.
ō " holy; o " obey.
ū as oo in moon; u " full.
y like French u or German ü.

It will be observed that the short vowels have the same sounds as the long vowels, but they are pronounced more quickly and lightly.

A long vowel marked ū is counted as equal to two short ones not marked.

Diphthongs: ae like aye or ai in aisle; oe like oi in coin;

au like ow in now; ei as in eight;

eu like ew (eh-oo); ui like we (ooee).

Consonants as in English except:

c and g always hard, as in come, gun; t always hard;

i consonant (j) like y; s sharp as in sale, lips; v like w;

z like dz in adze; qu as in English; bs, bt like ps, pt;

ph like f; ch like k: n before c, g, k, q, x as in anchor, anguish, anxious. A. 16; G. 3-7; A. 6, 7; P. 15-18.

V. The English Method. In the English method the sounds are generally the same as in English.*

1. Thus, vowels have their long English sounds —

a. In final syllables ending in a vowel, as sē, dō, except that unaccented final a is sounded like final a in America.

b. In all syllables before a vowel or diphthong, as deus, deōrum.

c. In penultimate syllables (the last but one), and in unaccented syllables, not final, before a single consonant, or before a mute followed by a liquid; as frāter, dolōris, cōnsulis, patrem: but unaccented i and y, except in the first and last syllable, are usually short.

d. In words like Achaia, Pompeius, i preceded by an accented a, e, o, or y, and followed by another vowel, has the sound of y; thus, A-ka-ya, Pom-pe-yus.

*If the English method of pronunciation be adopted, it is recommended that it be learned by actual practice with portions of Latin text, these rules being used for reference, and not for recitation.

2. Vowels have their short English sound—

a. In final syllables ending in a consonant: but final es is pronounced ease and final os like ose in dose.

b. In all syllables before x or two consonants, except a mute before a liquid; e. g. tēxit, templum, but in peplum e is long.

c. In all accented syllables not penultimate, before one or more consonants: but in words like aciēs, dēleō, moneō; where accented a, e, or o, comes before a single consonant (or a mute and a liquid) followed by e, i, or y before another vowel, the long sound is used.

3. i before another vowel in the same syllable is i consonant (j) and is to be pronounced as j: thus iugum = jugum; Iulius = Julius; iaciō = jaciō.

4. Diphthongs: ae and oe are pronounced as e, au as in laud, ei and ui like long i (thus, huic and cui are pronounced hike and ki), eu is pronounced as in neuter.

5. Consonants: c and g are soft (like s and j) before e, i, y, ae, oe, eu. and hard in other situations. C and t before i, often have the sound of sh but the hard sound is retained after s, t, and x. Ch is always hard, like k. Final s after e, ae, au, b, m, n, and r, is pronounced like z.

a. In tibi and sibi the i in both syllables is short, as in city. A. 17; H. 9-14.

VI. Syllables. Each Latin word contains as many syllables as it has vowels or diphthongs. In dividing words, a consonant is generally joined to the following vowel; but compound words should show their component parts. The last syllable of a word is called the ultima; the next to the last, the penult (paene almost and ultima last); the one before the penult, the antepenult. A. 14; G. 8, 9; H. 8, 14; P. 19-25.

VII. Quantity. 1. A syllable is long by nature if it contains a long vowel or diphthong. It is long by position if it contains a short vowel followed by x, or z, or any two consonants except a mute before a liquid: but before consonant i, nf, ns, gn, gm a vowel becomes long by nature, thus cūius, māgnus.

2. A syllable is short if its vowel is followed by another vowel, a diphthong, or the aspirate h.

3. A syllable is common in poetry, i. e. either long or short, when a short vowel is followed by a mute before a liquid.

4. The pronunciation of a vowel in the syllable is determined solely, by its length by nature, length by position affecting only the accent and the metrical value in poetry. A. 18; G. 10-13; H. 17; P. 26-29.

VIII. Accent. 1. Words of one syllable (except enclitics and proclitics) are regarded as accented.

2. Words of two syllables always have the accent on the penult.

3. Words of more than two syllables have the accent on the penult if it is long either by nature or by position, but if short, on the antepenult.

When an enclitic is joined to a word the accent falls on the syllable immediately preceding the enclitic. A. 19; G. 14; H. 16; P. 30-36.

Since the quantity of the penult determines the accent of any Latin word of more than two syllables, it will be necessary, in order to accent a Latin word with certainty, to know the quantity of that syllable only. This is readily ascertained by a knowledge of the principles in section VII, and by observing the marking of all long vowels in this book. The pronunciation of each syllable is also easily known, since all syllables (except diphthongs) not marked long are sounded short.

The teacher is advised at this point to turn to some page of the text and require the pupils to apply these principles in pronouncing Latin words.

IX. Order of words. The order of words in a Latin sentence is best learned by observation. After the text has been examined the student should observe how far the following principles are verified, and in connection with the models of the text, apply them in writing Latin sentences.

1. In a Latin sentence the relations of the words are indicated by their form, and great liberty is allowed in the order of their arrangement; e. g. Puer amat matrem, Puer matrem amat, Matrem puer amat, Amat matrem puer, all mean The boy loves his mother. The form of puer shows that it is in the nominative case, and therefore is the subject; and the form of matrem shows that it is in the case of the object; so that whatever may be the order of the words, there can be but one meaning to the sentence, so long as the form of each word remains unchanged. Contrast the English arrangement in these respects.

2. While much more liberty is allowed in the arrangement of Latin than of English words in a sentence, there are nevertheless some general principles which Latin usage has established and which are varied only for a definite reason:

a. The usual order in a Latin sentence is, (1,) subject; (2,) modifiers of the subject; (3,) modifiers of the verb; (4,) verb.

b. Governed and dependent words usually stand before the words on which they depend; but

c. A genitive usually follows its word.

d. The indirect object usually stands before the direct.

e. Adjectives generally prefer the place after their words.

f. When an adjective and a genitive modify the same word, the order is adjective, genitive, noun; e. g. an old friend of the Romans, vetus Rōmānōrum amicus.

g. Adverbs stand before their verbs, but quoque always follows its verb.

h. When a noun modified by an adjective is governed by a preposition of one syllable, the order is adjective, preposition, noun; e. g. māgnā ex parte, quā dē causā.

i. Enim, vērō, autem, quoque, quidem, never stand at the beginning of a sentence or clause.

j. The words nō . . . quidem (not even), used to emphasize a word, receive the emphatic word between them; e. g. not even the Romans, nō Rōmānī quidem (not the Romans even).

k. Any word is made emphatic by being placed in an unusual position. A desire for emphasis is, therefore, the chief reason for modifying the usual order of Latin words. The flow of the sentence no doubt had much to do with the choice and arrangement of its words. The individual peculiarities of authors would also produce variety in order.

A. 343-346; G. 674-684; H. 559-573; P. 584-597.

PENSUM PRIMUM

Recite and write this text from memory; translate into English:

Gallia est omnis dīvīsa in partēs trēs;

* VOCABULORUM INDEX

†pēnsūm, n. lesson, task	omnis every, all, as a whole prīmum first	dīvīsa divided vocābulōrum index vocabulary	in into Gallia, f. Gaul	partēs parts
est is	trēs three

The English words omnibus, omniscient, etc., are derived from omnis; part, party, partner, partial, etc., from partēs. Name other English words derived from these and other words in the vocabulary.

Give orally the Latin equivalents for the following:

Gaul — Gaul as a whole — is divided — Gaul is divided — parts — into parts — into three parts — Gaul is divided into parts — Gaul as a whole is divided into parts — Gaul is divided into three parts.

Answer in Latin, following the model answers. See note 2.

Estne † Gallia dīvīsa? (Gallia est dīvīsa). Quōmodo (how)

*Memorize accurately all the vocabularies, so that you can instantly name or write the Latin equivalent for the English word, or the English equivalent for the Latin word. In learning a language it is absolutely necessary to learn the words. In the recitation the English word should generally be pronounced and the pupil required to give the Latin equivalent. Master one word at a time.

†Although pensum originally meant 'a weaver's task' and its use to designate an exercise assigned to a pupil is modern, it will be used in this book as the most convenient term to designate our word lesson, which itself is generally employed apart from its original sense, a reading.

‡ne is used in questions where the answer is not implied, and is joined to the first word of the question. It is not to be translated.

est Gallia dīvisā? (Gallia in partēs est dīvisā). Quot in (into how many) partēs est Gallia dīvisā? Nōnne (is not) Gallia est omnis dīvisā?

*NOTES

1. The Latin has no article. The, an, or a must therefore be supplied by the student in translating, whenever the sense requires it.

2. In Latin questions are answered as follows:

a. Sometimes the substance of the question asked, is repeated in the answer, as in the above cases.

b. The verb or the emphatic word may be repeated for affirmation and nōn added to the verb or emphatic word for denial.

c. More rarely a simple yes is represented by such confirmatory words as ita, so; s̄anē, surely; certē, certainly; and the simple negative by nōn, not, no; nōn vērō (quidem), no indeed; minimē, by no means. A. 212; G. 473; H. 352; P. 582.

3. The interrogative particle nōnne expects an affirmative answer, and is rendered is not, are not, do not, etc. Thus, nōnne vērū est? is translated, is it not true? or, it is true, is it not?

4. Be exact in the pronunciation and accent of each word. When in doubt consult the Introductory Lesson, IV-VIII, or the grammars.

DECLENSION

†In Latin there are six cases, which are distinguished by different endings. Below are given the forms of Gallia in the singular number.

NOMINATIVE.	Galli-a	Gaul
GENITIVE.	Galli-ae	of Gaul
DATIVE.	Galli-ae	to or for Gaul
ACOUSATIVE.	Galli-am	Gaul
VOCATIVE.	Galli-a	O Gaul
ABLATIVE.	Galli-ā	with, by, from Gaul

*The notes to each lesson contain statements of facts and principles absolutely essential in acquiring the elements of Latin and must be thoroughly learned and recited. References to the parallel treatment of these subjects in the grammars are made for convenience in consultation and comparison, if desired, and not as an additional requirement.

†The explanation of cases is given in Penum V and the paradigm of the first declension in Penum VII. This declension and the exercises based upon it may be omitted until that lesson is studied.

PENSUM SECUNDUM

Review and recite all of the first lesson.

Recite and write from memory. Translate at first in the order of the Latin and then in a good English order, contrasting the different arrangements. See Introductory Lesson, IX.

NOTES

1. quot in partēs: What is the usual order of words when a noun modified by an adjective is governed by a monosyllabic preposition? See Introductory Lesson, IX, 2, h.

2. incolu-nt, they inhabit: -nt is the ending of the third person, plural number, active voice. When no subject is expressed the personal pronoun of that person and number must be supplied in translation: thus, incolunt, they inhabit, but Belgae incolunt, the Belgians inhabit.

DECLENSION

Declension of Belgae, representing the plural of first declension nouns.

ABLATIVE.	Belg-is	by, from, with the Belgae

Decline lingua in the singular with the endings given in the declension of Gallia, and in the plural with the endings of Belgae. Observe the endings in qu-ārum, ūn-am, ali-am, terti-am.

NOTES

1. appella-ntur, are called. -ntur is the ending of the third person, plural number, passive voice. What is the ending of the third, plural, active? II, 2.

2. inter sē differunt, differ from one another.

DECLENSION

Below are given the forms of Gallus, of the second declension:

NOTES

1. ā, ab: ā is used before a consonant, e. g. ā Belgīs; ab before vowels or consonants: as ab Aquitānīs, ab Sēquanīs.

2. dīvidi-t, (he, she, it) divides; es-t, (he, she, it) is; -t is the ending of the third person singular. What is the ending of the third person plural in the active? In the passive? II, 3.

3. Mātrona et Sēquana: These two nouns have their verb in the singular because the two rivers form one boundary line and therefore constitute but one subject. A. 205, b; G. 285, 2; H. 463, II, 3; P. 320 (1).

Note on the map the position of the three rivers mentioned in this lesson.

PENSUM QUINTUM

THE CASES

The term case is applied to show the relation of a noun to other words. The Latin has six cases:

a. The nominative case (cāsus nōminātīvus) corresponds to the nominative in English. Gallia divisa est.

b. The genitive (genetīvus) generally corresponds to the English possessive or the objective with the preposition of. Partēs trēs Galliae.

c. The dative (datīvus) is the case of the indirect object showing to or for which anything is or is done. It is often translated like the English objective with to or for.

d. The accusative (accūsātīvus) is the case of the direct object, following transitive verbs and many Latin prepositions. Unam partem incolunt Belgae.

e. The vocative (vocātīvus) is the case of direct address. Caesar!

f. The ablative (ablātīvus) expresses various adverbial relations such as are frequently expressed by the English objective with from, by, in, with. It is also often used with certain Latin prepositions. Linguā differunt.

In connection with the translation of the text of this and the preceding lessons, name the cases of the nouns used. The case can usually be named correctly from the relation suggested by the translation as subject or object, or as used with OF or with TO or FOR, or with BY, IN, FROM, WITH, etc.

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

These — of these — all — of all — of all these — the bravest of all — is — are — the Belgae are bravest — they (II, 2) are bravest of all these — they are bravest on account of this — because they are very far distant — the Belgae are distant from civilization — and also — and they are also distant from refinement — from the refinement of the province — the bravest Belgians differ from the Aquitanians — the river separates the Gauls from the civilization of these — because in their own language they are called the bravest.

Latīnē hīs respondētō:

Dicitō haec Latinē:

Resort to, visit — the merchants visit them — least often, very seldom — they very seldom visit them — they visit the Gauls — the traders import those things — those things which tend to weaken the courage — the merchants of the province resort to them — the Belgae do not visit the merchants — all these import those things — the very brave Belgae often visit the river — the river separates the traders from the Belgae — they by no means differ in language — they are not often distant from civilization — because — on account of this.

Latinē his respondētō:

Ad quōs (whom) commeant mercātōrēs? (Mercātōrēs ad Belgās commeant). Mercātōrēsne† ad Belgās saepe commeant? (Nōn, minimē saepe commeant). Quae rēs (what things) important mercātōrēs? *The particular form and force of this word will be explained hereafter. The definitions given show its root-meaning and its use in this passage. In like manner, while the brief definitions of such verbs as commeant, pertinent do not give the force of the ending -nt, their force in the text will be clearly understood from the principle stated in II, 2.

†See p. 22 †,

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. They differ in laws from the Aquitani who inhabit one part of the province. 2. They import these things on this account, because they are very far distant. 3. Those who are bravest inhabit another part. 4. They are very seldom called merchants in their own language. 5. The bravest of these often visit all parts.

So far as time permits let the pupil from the definitions given in the vocabulary and the principles heretofore explained, determine the form (case or tense, number, etc.) and use of each word.

NOTES1. estne, is?

a. The interrogative particle -ne is not translated but is added to the emphatic word in its clause to denote a question without implying the answer. Compare this with the use of nōnne, I, 3 (= pensum primum, note 3).

b. Words like -ne which are joined in writing to the preceding word are called enclitics (enclitica). How do they affect accent? See Intr. Lesson, VIII.

2. Observe that of the three connectives given, et, and, simply connects words or clauses; -que, which is always enclitic, connects more closely than et; atque generally gives prominence to what follows. A. 156, a; G. 475-477; H. 554, 2; P. 562.

PENSUM SEPTIMUMFIRST DECLENSION*INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. The formation of a noun, pronoun, or adjective in its various terminations is called declension (dēclīnātiō).

2. Latin nouns are inflected in five declensions, distinguished from one another by the final letter (characteristic) of their stem and by the termination of the Genitive singular. As the characteristic letter undergoes various phonetic changes the termination of the Genitive singular is given in vocabularies and lexicons after the Nominative and the declension thus readily and certainly made known. In those nouns which have only plural forms, the ending of the Genitive plural is placed after the Nominative form. A. 32; G. 26; H. 47; P. 89.

3. In the first declension the stem vowel, or characteristic, is a, the Genitive singular ends in -ae. From the characteristic vowel, a, this is called the a declension. A. 32; G. 29; H. 47.

Learn thoroughly the paradigm of lingua, observing the base, to which the endings are affixed, and the meaning of each case. Cf. V, Intr. note a-f.

NOTES

1. Nouns of the first declension are of the feminine gender, excepting the names of tribes, the names of men, and nouns denoting the occupations of men; e. g. Belgae, Galba, scriba, (clerk).

2. The stem is that part of the word which is common to each case.

3. The termination consists of the case-ending united with the characteristic vowel. When a case-ending is added to a stem ending in a vowel, one of the vowels usually disappears, or the two are contracted into one.

4. Filia (daughter) and dea (goddess) have the dative and ablative plural in -ābus, instead of -is, to distinguish these forms from the cases of filius and deus.

Like animus decline: Gallus, a Gaul; vicus, village; Rhēnus, the Rhine; also Aquitānī and Germānī in the plural. Like bellum decline: initium, beginning; rēgnum, kingdom; īnstitūtum, custom; pēnsūm, lesson. For other examples see App. 3; A. 38; G. 33; H. 51; P. 95.

Hereafter nouns of the second declension will be given in the manner usually followed in vocabularies and lexicons.

1. The bravest of the Gauls often wage wars. 2. These continually import those things which tend to weaken the courage. 3. All the Gauls differ in laws from the Belgae. 4. A river separates the provinces from refinement. 5. The Rhine separates the Belgians from the Germans with whom they wage wars. 6. Their own languages differ. 7. All these, who are next to the provinces, are not very far distant. 8. They carry on wars for this reason, because they differ in laws and languages.

Oral exercises of short phrases, varying the case and number, should be employed as time will permit.

NOTES

1. Nouns of the second declension ending in -us are with very few exceptions masculine. Those ending in -um are neuter. App. 47; A. 39; G. 4; H. 51; P. 95, 96.

2. The nominative is regularly formed from the stem by adding s for the masculine and m for the neuter. The endings -os, -om (-on neuter) are found in the older Latin.

3. The characteristic o is weakened to u in the endings -us and -um, and to e in the voc., e. g. anime; in the dat. and abl. sing. it is lengthened to ō. The ending -ī is for -oī, and -īs for -oīs. A. 38; G. 31; H. 51, 2).

PENSUM DECIMUM

ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS

INTRODUCTORY NOTE:

In Latin, adjectives are inflected like nouns. They agree with the noun or pronoun in gender, number, and case. Adjectives like māgnus, whose feminine terminations are like feminine nouns of the first declension, and whose masculine and neuter terminations are like masculine and neuter nouns of the second declension, are called adjectives of the first and second declensions.

Learn thoroughly the inflection of the adjective māgnus, observing that the terminations are exactly the same as in animus, causa, and bellum.

Now decline the noun and adjective together thus: causa magna, causae magnaee, etc. Also animus magnus, animi magni, animo magno, etc. The student must understand that the adjective does not agree with the noun in spelling, but in gender, number, and case. For other examples see App. 7; A. 81; G. 73; H. 148; P. 148.

Hereafter adjectives of the first and second declensions will be given in the manner usually followed in vocabularies and lexicons.

Let the student give the Nominative forms of the ordinals, first, second, etc.

Review the text of the preceding lessons, noting the forms of the adjectives in connection with the nouns which they modify.

In the declension of adjectives the forms for each gender should be given before passing to the next case. A rapid daily review of the forms learned is required to insure perfect readiness in their use.

NOTES

1. Adjectives like noster, our, whose stems end in -ro do not add s for the nom. masc. The o is dropped and e is inserted before r. The vocative is the same as the nominative. In other respects the endings are the same as in magnus. App. 7, b; A. 38, 82; G. 73; H. 149, note and 150; P. 143.

2. unus, neuter, alius, and a few other adjectives have the genitive singular ending -ius, and the dative ending -ī. They have no vocative forms. It will be observed that alius has the neuter singular ending in -ud. In other respects these adjectives are inflected like magnus.

NOTES

1. cum, (also spelled quum) is here a temporal conjunction meaning when, and not the preposition meaning with. It can usually be distinguished by its position in the clause, while the preposition is regularly followed by a noun in the ablative case.

2. suus, inflected like māgnus, may mean his, her, its, their (or his own, her own, etc) according to the gender and number of the subject of the sentence or clause in which it stands. The forms of suus and of the reflexive sē regularly refer to this subject. App. 26; A. 196; G. 309, 1-4. Rem.; H. 448, 449; P. 445 (1).

3. Words like aut . . . aut, either . . . or, used in pairs, are called cor-relatives.

4. in, with the ablative, means in, i. e. rest in a place; with the accusative, to, into, i. e. motion toward a place; thus in fīnibus, in the (boundaries, but in partēs, into parts.

(they) bring in; appellatur, (they) are called, and observe that -t is the ending of the third singular active, -tur of the third singular passive, -nt of the third plural active, -ntur of the third plural passive.

3. Distinguish between the passive ending -tur in continētur and the adverb ending -ter in continenter.

PENSUM TERTIUM DECIMUM

THE THIRD DECLENSION

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. The stems of nouns of the third declension end in a vowel, i; or a liquid, l, n, r; or a mute (Intr. Less. II). The termination of the genitive singular is -is. A. 43; G. 35; H. 56; P.

2. Masculine and feminine nouns whose stems end in a mute regularly form the nominative by adding -s. A lingual mute (d or t) is suppressed before -s. Thus the nominative pars is from the stem part-, hūmānitās from the stem hūmānitāt-. A palatal mute, (c or g) unites with -s forming x. Thus the nominative lēx is from the stem lēg-|-s. A labial mute (b or p) remains unchanged before the -s; thus prīnceps from the stem prīncip-. App. 4, a; A. 44; G. 50; H. 58, 1, 3; P. 101.

3. In nouns whose stems end in a liquid (l, n, r) the nominative is the same as the stem, or a modification of the stem. Thus the nominative cōnsul is from the stem cōnsul-; mercātor is from the stem mercātōr-, the long vowel ō of the stem being weakened to o; flūmen, river, is from the stem flūmin-, the vowel i of the stem being strengthened to e to form the nominative. App. 4, b; A. 48; G. 39, 40; H. 60, 1, 3; P. 103.

4. Masculine and feminine nouns whose stems end in i, form the nominative by adding s to the stem. Thus the nominative fīnis, end, limit, is from the stem fīni-. The i of the stem is sometimes modified to e in the nominative. Thus nūbēs, cloud, is from the stem nūbi-. App. 4, c. A. 51-59; G. 56, 57; H. 62, 64; P. 108.

5. Consonant stems of the third declension may always be found by cutting off the termination (-is) of the genitive singular, but nouns with vowel (i) stems show this stem vowel independently of the termination only in the nominative and vocative singular (here sometimes modified to e) and in the genitive plural. That the stem vowel (i) in the other forms is dropped before the case ending or unites with it, will be clear from a comparison of the paradigm of finis given below.

Learn thoroughly the paradigms of lĕx, law; finis, end, limit; flūmen, river, noting the stem and termination for each case.

NOTES

1. The third declension includes nouns of all three genders.
 - a. Nouns like lēx (lēg- + s), with the nominative ending in s following a consonant, are regularly feminine. App. 47; A. 65, b; G. 55; H. 105; P. 118.
 - b. Parisyllabic nouns (i. e. with the same number of syllables in nominative and genitive singular) ending in -is or -ēs are by rule feminine. They include, however, a number of masculine nouns (as finis; mēnsis, month; ignis, fire; collis, hill). App. 4; A. 65, b; G. 58; H. 105; P. 118-123.
 - c. Nouns like flūmen, with the nominative ending in -men, are neuter. A. 65, c; G. 43, 2; H. 111; P. 118-123.
2. Vowel stems include:
 - a. Parisyllabic nouns ending in -is, -ēs, or -e.
 - b. Neuters in -e, -al and -ar.
 - c. Many nouns whose stems apparently end in two consonants. These must be determined from observation and a comparison of their forms.

PENSUM QUARTUM DECIMUM

ADJECTIVES OF THE THIRD DECLENSION

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. Adjectives of the third declension are called adjectives of one, two or three terminations according as they have the same termination for each gender in the nominative singular (of one termination), or the same form for the masculine and feminine and another for the neuter (of two terminations), or a different form for each gender (of three terminations)

2. Adjectives like omnis (of two terminations) are -i stems, having the ablative singular ending in -ī, the genitive plural -ium, the neuter plural -ia, and the accusative plural -is or -ēs.

Learn the inflection of the adjective omnis, noting that the masculine and feminine genders are alike, and that the endings are the same as in finis. The neuter will be easily remembered by recalling the cases that have the same form.

Decline the nouns animus, causa, bellum, pars, flūmen, and others in each case modifying with the adjective omnis, thus: omnis animus — omnis animī — omnī animō — omnem animum, etc. The student will need to remember that the adjective agrees with the noun, not in spelling, but in gender, number, and case. For a fuller exhibition of forms, see the Appendix or the grammars. A daily review of these important forms will insure permanence of knowledge. Hereafter, adjectives of the third declension will be given in the manner usually followed in vocabularies and lexicons.

NOTES

1. ab denotes position as well as separation and in the phrase ab Sēquanīs et Helvētīs, etc., may be rendered, on the side of. Compare its use in previous lessons.

2. sumusne: use of -ne? I, foot note.

PENSUM QUINTUM DECIMUM

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. The comparative degree of adjectives is formed by adding -ior to the stem of the positive, less the stem vowel, for the masculine and feminine genders, and -ius for the neuter. Thus īferus, stem īfer(o) + -ior = īferior.

2. With the nominative, thus formed, as a stem, comparatives are inflected with endings of the third declension.

Learn thoroughly the paradigm of īferior, lower, observing (1) that the masculine and feminine genders are alike (as in omnis), (2) that the endings are those already learned in the the third declension, (3) as the neuter singular has the accusative and vocative like the nominative it does not show the stem īferior- in these cases and (4) the genitive plural ends in -um and the neuter plural ends in -a (not -ium and -ia for these cases as in parasyllabic words). Compare the other endings with those of omnis.

Inflect together pars inferior; Gallia inferior; animus inferior; flūmen inferius, thus, animus inferior, animī inferiōris, animō inferiōrī, etc.

3. Adjectives whose nominative form is the same for all genders are called adjectives of one termination. They are consonant stems but have the form of i stems in the ablative singular (-ior-e), in the genitive plural (-ium) and in the neuter (nom., acc., voc., -ia).

Recite the paradigm of oriēns, rising, noting the formation of the nominative from the stem as explained in XIII, Intr. note 2. Compare these forms with those of omnis.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Those who (quī) inhabit Aquitania are called Aquitanians in our language. 2. Aquitania is separated (divīsa) from Spain by the Pyrenees mountains. 3. For this reason the merchants very seldom visit Spain. 4. The Belgians, who are braver than the Celts, (do) not import those things which tend to weaken their courage. 5. One part, which extends to the ocean, is bounded by the mountains and rivers. 6. The Pyrenees mountains are very far distant from the Belgae. 7. It has been said (that) the Aquitani possess that part which is toward Spain. 8. The lower parts of the river extend to the great mountains. 9. The brave Aquitani are not kept away from the civilization of the Romans.

Latinē his respondēto:

1 In the first three declensions some exceptions in the use of case endings and in genders occur in Greek nouns. See Grammars.
 2 Stem usually undergoes euphonic change in the nominative.
 3 Wanting, and stem usually undergoes euphonic change in the nominative.
 4 This much of the stem is called the base which may always be found by dropping the ending of the Genitive singular; the declension of any noun may be built up by adding the proper case endings of the above table to the base. In consonant stems the base and stem are usually identical.

Write a translation of chapter I in good English.

Inflect the nouns and adjectives of this chapter, and name the case and number of the forms found in the text.

PENSUM DUODEVICESIMUM

Caput primum memoriter prōfer (chapter first from memory recite).

A rapid recitation of the first chapter each day is earnestly recommended. This need not occupy more than two minutes, and is invaluable in furnishing models and fixing in the mind the exact order of the words. Hereafter the memorizing of the text need not be required; but the student should be so familiar with it as to render the Latin into English or the English into Latin when pronounced in short sentences by the teacher.

Recite rapidly the paradigms already learned.

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. The Demonstrative pronouns (prōnōmina dēmōnstrātīva) are so called because they specify the objects to which they refer. They are used either alone as substantives or with nouns as adjectives. Excepting ipse, self, they have no vocative forms.

2. Is, he, this, that, is the weakest of the demonstratives and refers to some object just mentioned or to one to be explained by a relative. The Latin has no personal pronouns of the third person and the forms of is are frequently used instead. A. 102, d.

Learn thoroughly the forms of is, observing when its stem i is changed to e and when its terminations differ from those of māgnus.

Declension of is (he, this, that), ea (she, this, that), id (it, this, that).

Sequentia litterīs Latīnīs mādātō:

1. Orgetorix was more noted than the rest of the Helvetians. 2. He is most wealthy, for this reason, because he imports those things into the provinces. 3. He continually made conspiracies with the Aquitani who dwell across these mountains. 4. Orgetorix is the richest of all these. 5. They themselves dwell among the Germans and wage daily battles with them.

NOTES

1. Longē, adverb from the adjective longus. Adverbs from adjectives of the second declension are formed by cutting off the nominative case-ending -s of the adjective and changing the stem vowel o to ē; e. g. longus, case-ending -s, stem vowel o changed to ē gives longē. Cf. longissimē, V, and minimē, VI.

2. The superlative degree (gradus superlativus) is formed by adding -issimus, -issima, -issimum to the stem of the positive less the final vowel; e. g. nobilis, stem nobili-, superlative nobilissimus. It is inflected throughout like magnus, X. Observe that dītissimus is contracted for dīvitissimus. For the formation of the superlative, cf. A. 89; G. 86; H. 162; P. 165.

3. In general the student should not employ is or ii (eī) to represent the English he and they which are regularly expressed in Latin by the terminations of the verb, -t (-tur), -nt (-ntur).

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

A consul — consuls — in the consulship of Marcus Messala and Marcus Piso — royal power — a desire of royal power — influenced by a desire of royal power — influenced by that desire — he was most wealthy — he made a conspiracy of the nobles — he persuaded — Orgetorix persuaded the citizens — Messala and Piso are consuls — they have (habent) a desire of sovereignty.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. Orgetorix, the most noted (man) among the Helvetians, persuaded the nobles. 2. Messala and Piso were consuls when (ubi) Orgetorix made the conspiracy. 3. The desire for royal power tends to great wars. 4. The state was very wealthy in the consulship of Marcus Messala and Marcus Piso. 5. That conspiracy of the nobility made them most noted. 6. Orgetorix persuaded a part of the nobility.

Latīnē his respondētō:

NOTES

1. Many verbs which in English govern the direct object, in Latin govern the Dative of the indirect object: thus, civitātī persuāsit, he persuaded (used persuasive arguments to) the citizens. This is true in general of verbs which indirectly affect their object either for good or ill. App.

61; A. 227; G. 346; H. 385, I, II; P. 375, 376.

2. M. Messalā, etc. a. As the consuls, the two executive officers of the Roman republic, were elected annually, their names were often used to designate the year of their administration. b. In translating an abbreviation (as M.) always give the full form which the abbreviation designates.

3. Observe that the phrase M. Messalā et M. Pisōne cōsulibus is grammatically independent of the rest of the sentence, i. e. it is an absolute construction. This construction is called the Ablative Absolute (ablātīvus absolūtus). A participle (or group of participles) is most frequently used with a noun (or group of nouns) in this construction, but when the place of the participle is filled by a noun (or adjective) the participial idea of being is implied: thus, Marcus Messala and Marcus Piso 'being' consuls. The best English style, however, avoids the participial construction. The phrase may be rendered, in the consulship of Marcus Messala and Marcus Piso. App. 98; A. 255 and a; G. 409, 410; H. 431, 4; P. 422.

4. Nouns ending in -tās, genitive -tātis, (e. g. cupiditās, nōbilitās, civitās) are of the feminine gender. For formation of the nominative from the stem, see XII, Intr. N. 2.

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. Nine adjectives of the first and second declensions have the genitive singular in -īus (in alter usually -ius) and the dative singular in -ī in all genders. These are alius, sōlus, ūllus, ūnus, tōtus, nullus, alter, uter, neuter.

2. Learn the declension of ūnus, one, alius, another, tōtus, the whole, alter, the other, comparing the genitive and dative forms with those of is and other forms with those of māgnus.

sion of the government — to get possession of the government of entire Gaul — he said it was very easy to get possession of the government of entire Gaul.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. In the consulship of Marcus Messala and Marcus Piso, he persuaded the citizens to go forth from their boundaries. 2. He said (dixit) it was very easy to get possession of Gaul and the river Rhone. 3. The merchants often visit them. 4. Since they surpassed all in valor. 5. It is very easy to get possession. 6. Inflect together Mārcus Pīsō, finis suus, omnis cōpia, tōta Gallia.

NOTES

1. Esse, literally to be is in the infinitive mode, because it follows a verb of saying suggested by persuāsit in the preceding sentence. When an infinitive follows a verb of mental action, i. e. of declaring or thinking (expressed or understood), it should be translated into English by the indicative mode. Thus, perfacile esse, (saying) that it is very easy. This is called the infinitive in indirect discourse (ōrātiō oblīqua). The direct discourse (ōrātiō rēcta) i. e. the exact words of Orgetorix, would read perfacile est, it is very easy. Cf. Gallōs obtinēre dictum est, XII. App. A. 336, I. 2; G. 648-663; H. 522, 523, I.; P. 514 ff.

2. The subject of the infinitive is in the accusative case. In rendering into English, translate by the nominative.

3. potīrī, to get control of, has its object, imperīō, in the ablative. App. 91; A. 249; G. 407; H. 421, I.; P. 419. What is the regular case of the direct object?

NOTES

1. The relative regularly agrees with its antecedent in gender and number but its case depends upon the construction of the clause to which it belongs: thus quī is masculine singular in agreement with its antecedent Rhēnō (Rhodanō) but is in the nominative case, the subject of dīvidit.

2. Adjectives of the first and second declensions (like noster) whose stem ends in ro- form the nominative and vocative masculine like noun stems in ro-, XIX, Intr. note 3. The other terminations are as in māgnus. App. 7; A. 82; G. 31, 73; H. 149; P. 143.

Sequentia litterīs Latīnīs mandātō:

1. It happened that the Helvetians wandered less widely. 2. It happened that they could less easily bring war upon the Germans. 3. Both the Helvetians and the Belgae wage war with the Germans. 4. This wide river separates their country from our province. 5. Because of these things he persuaded them to go forth from their fields.

NOTES

1. Nouns of the fifth declension are feminine, except diēs, which is usually masculine. The only nouns fully declined are diēs and rēs.

2. hīs rēbus, because of (from or in consequence of or on account of) these things. The ablative (commonly without a preposition) is used to express cause. cf. hōc, on this account; quā dē causā, for this reason. App. 85; A. 245; G. 408; H. 416; P. 404.

3. finitimīs bellum inferre, to bring war upon their neighbors. Most verbs compounded with the prepositions in, prae, etc., govern the dative of the indirect object. Thus finitimīs is in the dative, the indirect object of the compound inferre (in, into, upon + ferre, to bring). Thus also omnibus praestarent (XX), they surpassed (stood before) all, where omnibus is in the dative, the indirect object of the compound verb praestarent (prae, before + starent, stood). App. 62; A. 225; G. 347; H. 386; P. 377.

PENSUM VICESIMUM QUARTUM

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. There are four conjugations of Latin verbs, distinguished by the final vowel of the present stem, as follows:

First conjugation,	ā
Second	ē
Third	e
Fourth	ī

2. Certain parts of the regular verb from their importance are called principal parts (partēs primāriae) and are always given in vocabularies and lexicons. They are the Present Indicative, the Present Infinitive, the Perfect Indicative, and the Supine or Perfect Participle. The latter will be given in this book. The Present Infinitive ends in -re, and always contains the stem vowel before that syllable. This form is therefore of great importance, as it shows to which conjugation the verb belongs; e. g., amāre, monēre, tegere, audire.

3. The personal endings for the Indicative and Subjunctive modes, excepting the Perfect Indicative, are as follows:

Singulāris	Plūrālis
-ō or -m (I)	-mus (we)
-s (thou, you)	-tis (you)
-t (he, she, it)	-nt (they)

4. The Present Indicative is formed by adding the personal endings -m (-ō,)*-s, -t; -mus, -tis, -nt to the present stem. Thus from bellāre, to make war, by cutting off -re, the ending of the present infinitive active, we have the present stem bellā-: add these personal endings and we have the Present Indicative complete.

Tempus praesens

Singulāris	Plūrālis
1. bell(a)-ō I war	1. bellā-mus we war
2. bellā-s thou warrest (you war)	2. bellā-tis you war
3. bella-t he (she) wars	3. bella-nt they war

5. The Imperfect Indicative is formed from the present stem, with a tense sign -ba- and the personal endings.

Tempus imperfectum

bellā-ba-m I was warring	bellā-bā-mus we were warring
bellā-bā-s thou wast (you were) warring	bellā-bā-tis you were warring
bellā-ba-t he (she) was warring	bellā-ba-nt they were warring

6. The Future Tense is formed from the present stem with the tense sign -bi-, and the personal endings. In the third plural the vowel i of the tense sign -bi- is weakened to u: thus

Tempus futūrum

bellā-b(i)-ō I shall war	bellā-bi-mus we shall war
bellā-bi-s thou wilt (you will) war	bellā-bi-tis you will war
bellā-bi-t he (she) will war	bellā-bu-nt they will war

Inflect according to the above forms the verbs, effeminō, importō, spectō, praestō, amō (I love).

Give the meaning of the following verb forms and name the conjugation of each verb according to the principles stated in notes 1 and 2:

dividō, dividere; incolō, incolere; appellō, appellāre; commēō,

*The Present and Future Indicative have lost the m and end in the modified stem vowel ō.

commeāre; effēminō, effēmināre; importō, importāre; gerō, gerere.

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

From this consideration — men — men fond of warring — a man fond of war — great vexation — they were filled with great vexation — I affect — to affect — to affect with grief — it happened that these men wandered — I will make war with these men — we shall easily make war — I often resort to these men — the neighbors were making war — he persuaded this man — you import — you were importing — he is desirous of that part — it is very easy to get possession of the government.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. From this consideration, the men were filled with great vexation. 2. The Gauls, who are fond of making war, were affected with the desire for royal power. 3. Those who make war, often contend with great valor. 4. The man who made this conspiracy was influenced (inductus est) by the laws of the state. 5. Their boundaries extend to the other river. 6. The Belgae faced (were facing) towards the lower parts of the Rhine. 7. The Belgae, who are bravest of all the Gauls, often contend in battle with their neighbors.

Latīnē his respondētō:

Quae verba Latīna sīgnificant (what Latin words mean) from this consideration? Quod verbum sīgnificat a man? men? Quae ōrātiōnis pars est parte? ex? quā? In quō cāsū est parte? hominēs? Quā in vōce (in what voice) est afficiēbantur? (In vōce passīvā est). In quō tempore (in what tense) est afficiēbantur? (In tempore imperfectō).

 Quid dēclārat (what shows) tempus imperfectum? (Temporis sīgnum [the tense sign] -ba-).

NOTES

1. bellandī, of making war (of warring) is the genitive of the gerund of the verb bellō. The gerund is formed by adding to the present stem -nd- with the endings of the oblique cases (gen. dat. acc. abl.) of a neuter noun in the second declension, singular number. It is therefore a verbal noun governing the same cases as its verb and is itself governed as a noun. It closely corresponds in meaning to the English noun ending in -ing. App. 125; A. 114, 295; G. 425 ff.; H. 200, 11; P. 548 (1).

2. bellandī cupidī, fond of warring. The quality denoted by cupidī is directed toward bellandī as its object; bellandī is therefore an objective genitive (genitīvus obiectīvus) governed by the adjective cupidī. Other adjectives which require an object of reference are those denoting knowledge, power, skill, etc. App. 55; A. 218 and a; G. 374; H. 399; P. 359, 360.

PENSUM VICESIMUM SEXTUM

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. In the passive voice the tenses formed from the present stem (XXIV, intr. note 4) in the Indicative and Subjunctive modes have the following personal endings:

Singularis		Plūrālis
-or, -r	(I)	-mur	(we)
-ris, -re	(thou, you)	-minī	(you)
-tur	(he, she, it)	-ntur	(they)

2. By employing these terminations instead of the active forms (XXIV, intr. note 3) the present, imperfect, and future tenses in the passive are formed exactly as the corresponding tenses in the active (XXIV, intr. notes, 4, 5, 6), thus from amāre, to love, we have:

Tempus praesēns

Singularis	Plūrālis
am(a)-or, I am loved	amā-mur, we are loved amā-ris, (-re), you are loved	amā-minī, you are loved amā-tur, he (she, it) is loved	ama-ntur, they are loved

Tempus imperfectum

amā-ba-r, I was loved	amā-bā-mur, we were loved amā-bā-ris, (-re), you were loved	amā-bā-mini, you were loved amā-bā-tur, he (she, it) was loved	amā-ba-ntur, they were loved

Tempus futūrum

amā-b(i)-or, I shall be loved	amā-bi-mur, we shall be loved amā-be-ris, (-re), thou wilt (you will) be loved	amā-bi-mini, you will be loved amā-bi-tur, he (she, it) will be loved	amā-bu-ntur, they will be loved

Inflect in the passive according to the above, the verbs, appellō, importō, spectō, arbitror (I think), vagor (I wander).

Below are given the paradigms of the remaining three conjugations in the Present, Imperfect, and Future, of the Indicative mode, Passive Voice.

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. Masculine and feminine nouns of the fourth declension form the nominative by adding s to the stem vowel u. The genitive singular ending is -ūs.

2. The stem vowel (characteristic) u appears in all the cases, except that it is generally weakened to i in the dative and ablative plural.

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

In proportion to, considering — considering the great number of men — considering (their) glory in (of) war and (their) courage — they thought they had — the boundaries extended in length — they extended in width — they extended two hundred miles — forty miles — eighty miles — one hundred miles — three paces — a hundred paces — two hundred paces — of lake Geneva — civilization in proportion to the laws — the customs of civilization.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. The Helvetians, who had (habēbant) a large number of men, thought they had narrow limits. 2. These boundaries extended many (multa) miles in length and breadth. 3.

Orgetorix persuaded them to go forth from these boundaries. 4. They were greatly troubled because their limits were narrow.

Latinē hīs respondētō:

Quī arbitrābantur angustōs finīs sē habēre? Quam longē (how far) patēbant finēs Helvētiōrum? Quot mīlia passuum in longitudinem patēbant finēs Helvētiōrum? Quis Helvētiīs persuāsit? Nōne Helvētiōrum finēs angustī erant? Fuitne multītūdō Helvētiōrum māgnā? Habēbantne hī glōriam bellī. Habēs (have you) māgnam fortitūdinem?

NOTES

1. habēre, to have, with the verb of thinking, arbitrābantur, is rendered by the indicative had. angustōs . . . arbitrābantur: they thought they had narrow boundaries. Cf. XX., 1, 2.

2. Verbs like arbitror, vagor, potior, orior, with the signification of the active voice and forms of the passive, are called deponent (verba dēpōnentia).

3. multītūdō, is formed of the adjective multus, much, many, and the ending -tūdō. Nouns with this ending are of the feminine gender. By using this ending, form nouns from sōlus, alone; grātus, pleasing, grateful; fortis, brave.

4. Nouns of the fourth declension whose nominative ends in -us are, with few exceptions, of the masculine gender. Those ending in -ū are neuter.

5. The Roman foot (pēs) was $11\frac{3}{4}$ inches in length. The passus consisted of five pedes and was therefore four feet and ten inches in length. The passus was the measure of the stride made from the place where the foot is lifted to the point where it is again put down. As no English measure represents its length, the Roman term may be used in translating. The Roman mile (mille passuum) consisted of one thousand passus.

6. The cardinal numerals from quattuor (four) to centum are indeclinable. The cardinals for hundreds (e. g. ducenti) are declined like the plural of māgnus.

(Quam cum gradū superlātīvō sīgnificat as . . . as possible).

NOTES

1. comparāre, coēmere, facere: the infinitive is used with many verbs (as cōstituērunt, they determined, also verbs denoting ability, intention, endeavor, daring etc.) which require another action of the same subject to complete their meaning. This is called the complementary infinitive (infīnītīvus complēmentārius). Thus in the text above facere (also comparāre, coēmere) is the complement of the verb cōstituērunt (complēmentum verbī cōstituērunt).

PENSUM TRICESIMUM PRIMUM.

Review the introductory notes in pensum XXIV.

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. The Perfect stem of verbs of the first (ā) conjugation (and also of the fourth and often of the second) is regularly formed by adding v to the present stem. Thus from amāre, present stem amā- we have the perfect stem amāv-; from comparā-re, the perfect stem comparāv-.

2. The perfect stem of most verbs of the third conjugation whose stem vowel is long either by nature or position is found by adding s to the present stem, minus the stem vowel: from dūcere, present stem dūce- we have the perfect stem dūx-: from dīcere, to say, present stem dīce- we have the perfect stem dīx-.

3. The perfect stem is generally the same as the present stem (minus the stem vowel) in third conjugation verbs whose present stem has u- (or nd-) before the stem vowel: thus from cōstituere, present stem cōstitu-, we have the perfect stem cōstitu-.

4. The personal endings of the perfect indicative are

-ī	(I)	-imus	(we)
-istī	(thou, you)	-istis	(you)
-it	(he, she, it)	-ērunt	-ēre (they)

The perfect tense is formed by adding these endings to the perfect stem, e. g.

amāre, to love

Present stem amā-

Perfect stem amāv-

5. The pluperfect tense is formed by adding the tense sign -era (had) to the perfect stem with the personal endings, -m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt.

Tempus plusquam perfectum

Singularis

amāv-era-m, I had loved

6. The future perfect tense is formed by adding the tense sign -eri- to the perfect stem, with the personal endings -ō, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt. The vowel i of the tense sign unites with the ending -ō.

Dicitō haec Latinē:

For accomplishing these things — a year — two years — I consider — they considered — they considered that two years were sufficient — were sufficient for themselves — of themselves — of himself — the third year — for the third year — I establish — they establish peace and friendship — they will determine a departure — a law — laws — by law — in laws —

I choose — Orgetorix chooses — Orgetorix is chosen — he loves himself — they love themselves — they will love themselves — he persuaded himself — they will have persuaded themselves.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Led on by these things they determined to establish peace and friendship with the state. 2. They determined to purchase carts and to make plantings in order that (ut) a supply of grain might be at hand on the journey. 3. They considered that three parts were sufficient for them. 4. A departure was established by their laws. 5. They selected Orgetorix for accomplishing those things.

Latinē his respondētō:

Quot annōs dūxērunt sibi satis esse? Quem in annum cōfirmant profectiōnem? Quōmodo cōfirmant profectiōnem? Quis dēligitur? Cūr Orgetorix dēligitur? Orgetorix-ne ad eās rēs cōficiendās dēligitur?

NOTES

1. The reflexive pronoun refers to the subject of the sentence or clause. Its number, therefore, can be determined by reference to this subject.

The possessive adjective suus, -a, -um formed from the same root takes its gender, number and case from the object possessed.

2. esse why infinitive? XX, 1.

3. Nouns like profectiō, ending in -iō, genitive -iōnis, denote action, and are of the feminine gender. They are formed from the perfect participle stem; e. g., proficiscor, I depart, perf. part. profectus, whence profect-iō, departure. Cf. vocātiō, from vocō, orātiō, from orō. The declension stem of these nouns appears in English without change; e. g., vocation, oration.

4. Gerund and Gerundive: cf. XXV, 2.

a. The gerund is the verbal noun; as a noun it is governed by another word, as a verb it governs other words. In the expression spatium tēla coniciendī, coniciendī is the verbal noun in the genitive case with spatium. In turn coniciendī governs tēla as the literal translation shows.

b. The gerundive, however, is the future passive participle, and, like all participles, it has the syntax of an adjective, agreeing with (not governing) another word. In the expression ad eās rēs cōficiendās, cōficiendās is the gerundive in the accusative case, agreeing with rēs, rēs is governed by ad, and the expression means, literally, for these things to be accomplished. The two constructions are used to express the same notion; but while the former (gerund) seems more like the English idiom the Latin usually prefers the latter (gerundive).

	obtineō -ēre, obtinui obtain, possess, hold

Dicitō haec Latinē:

An embassy — of an embassy — Orgetorix undertook an embassy — he took on himself an embassy to the states — journey — on the journey — on that journey — he persuades Casticus — he persuades the son of Catamantaloedes — he persuades Casticus the Sequanian — father — whose father — of whose father — whose father had held — had held the royal power — the royal power among the Sequanians — had possessed for many years — I obtain — to possess — Orgetorix is chosen for accomplishing these things — they thought three years were sufficient — they establish their departure — his father was a Sequanian.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. The father of Casticus had possessed the royal power many years. 2. The Helvetians, aroused by Orgetorix, determined to purchase many carts and to plant as much as possible. 3. On that journey Orgetorix undertook to persuade the son of Catamantaloedes. 4. Casticus the Sequanian, whose father was holding the royal power, undertook an embassy to Gaul. 5. In the year of this embassy Orgetorix led the nobility to undertake the conspiracy. 6. The Helvetians did not take those things upon themselves. 7. They had undertaken war in the consulship of Messala and Piso. 8. Casticus thinks that this is (XX, 1) very easy.

Latīnē hīs respondētō:

NOTES

1. sibi: Determine from the verb whether it means (upon) himself or themselves. XXXII, 1.

2. Casticō: Construction? XIX, 1.

3. filiō, Sēquanō: These nouns refer to Casticō, i. e., they are in apposition with Casticō. The appositive agrees with its subject in case. These nouns are therefore in the dative in apposition with Casticō, the indirect object of the verb persuāsit.

4. filius, son, the possessive meus and proper nouns in -ius (as Casius) have the vocative in -ī, (for -ie): e, g., mī fili, my son!

5. multōs annōs, for many years: The Accusative is employed to denote duration of time (accūsātīvus temporālis).

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

- 1 The irregular verb sum (I am) is employed frequently in its present tenses as an auxiliary verb.
- 2 Paradigm of sum, I am. (esse to be).

MODUS INDICATIVUS

Tempus praesens

Singulāris	Plūrālis
s-u-m , I am.	s-u-mus , we are.

er-i-s , you will be.	er-i-tis , you will be.
er-i-t , he will be.	er-u-nt , they will be.

3. The perfect tense in the passive voice is formed of the perfect passive participle and the present tense of the verb sum, thus,

Tempus perfectum

Singulāris	Plūrālis
amāt-us sum I have been loved, was loved.	amāt-ī sumus amāt-us es	amāt-ī estis
amāt-us est	amāt-ī sunt

4. The masculine endings -us (singular) and -ī (plural) only are here presented but the student must understand that the participle, as an adjective, agrees with the subject of the verb in gender, number, and case. Thus if the subject is of the feminine gender, we have amāta (or plural amātae): if neuter, the singular amātum or plural amāta.

5. The pluperfect tense in the passive voice is formed of the perfect passive participle and the imperfect tense of the verb sum: thus,

amāt-us eram I had been loved.	amāt-ī erāmus
amāt-us erās	amāt-ī erātis
amāt-us erat	amāt-ī erant

6. The future perfect tense in the passive voice is formed of the perfect passive participle and the future tense of the verb sum: thus,

amāt-us erō I shall have been loved	amāt-ī erimus
amāt-us eris	amāt-ī eritis
amāt-us erit	amāt-ī erunt

But (a) in the first conjugation the stem vowel -ā is modified to ē and the mode vowel disappears and (b) in the third conjugation the stem vowel -e disappears before the mode vowel.

Inflect in the same way the subjunctive of verbs given in the vocabularies of preceding lessons, determining the conjugation as explained in XXIV, Intr. n. 1, 2. Examine the verbs in the text of the preceding lessons and state where found.

In the following exercise the auxiliaries may and let are used in the translation of the present subjunctive, might for the imperfect subjunctive, may have for the perfect, and might have for the pluperfect. The student must, however, remember the statement in 3* above.

NOTES

1. The future active participle combined with some form of the verb sum denotes intended or future action. Thus the future active participle obtentūrus combined with esset (the imperfect subjunctive of sum) may be translated would get control of or intended to get control of. In the same way we may translate amātūrus sum, I intend to (am about to) love; probātūrī sumus, we intend to prove; datūrus erat, he would give; etc. This construction is called the first or active periphrastic conjugation.

2. factū; The supine is a verbal noun of the fourth declension used only in the accusative (termination -um) and ablative (termination -ū). The ablative of the supine is employed with a few adjectives and nouns to show in respect to what the statement is made. Thus, perfacile factū, very easy to do or in doing.

App. 129; A. 303; G. 436; H. 547; P. 555.

Dicitō haec Lātīnē:

He shows — that it is very easy — very easy to accomplish their undertakings — because — because he intended to gain the supreme power — that it was doubtful — not doubtful that — that the Helvetians were the most powerful — he promises that he will win — by his own resources and army — the armies of Gaul.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. They proved to all their friends that it was very easy to do. 2. These attempts were made in many states. 3. The supreme power was held by the Roman consul. 4. A great number of men were intending to gain the royal power. 5. Orgetorix showed the Helvetians that it was not doubtful that they were the most powerful of all.

Latinē his respondētō:

Tōtius Galliae quī poterant plūrimum (were the most powerful)? Quid cōfirmābat Orgetorix? (Orgetorix sē illis rēgna conciliātūrum cōfirmābat.) Quōmodo, erat rēgna conciliātūrus (how was he going to win etc.)? Nōne rēgna illis conciliāvit? (Rēgna illis nōn conciliāvit.) Quō in cāsū est Galliae? (Galliae est in cāsū Genetivō) Quō in cāsū est cōpūs? rēgna? Cūius generis est exercitū? rēgna? (rēgna generis neutrī est.)

NOTES

1. sē illis rēgna conciliātūrum (esse), that he will win the royal power for them.

2. Observe that in the translation of indirect discourse (XX, 1) the English idiom requires the introduction of the conjunction that but the Latin employs no introductory word.

3. The subject of the infinitive is in the accusative. Thus sē is acc., subject of the infinitive conciliātūrum (esse). Cf. Gallōs obtinēre (Less. XII); sē habēre, (Less. XXVI) biennium esse (XXXII).

App. 120; A. 336, 2; G. 527; H. 536; P. 401.

4. conciliātūrum: supply esse which is frequently omitted in the future infinitive. For the infin. see XX, 1.

5. For the number of sē see XXXII. 1. Observe that the ending -um conciliātūrum agrees with this subject.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Influenced by these speeches they gave a pledge and oaths to each other. 2. They hoped that, when they had seized the royal power, they could (posse) get possession of the government of all Gaul. 3. Aroused by this speech, they determined to get possession of as great a number of carts as possible. 4. They hoped to be able to establish peace and friendship with the nearest state. 5. He hopes he can (posse) persuade Casticus to give (ut . . . det) to him his daughter in marriage.

Latinē his respondētō:

Inflect the verb spērō, according to the models given in XXIV, XXVI, XXXI, XXXIV, XXXVI.

NOTES

1. hāc ōrātiōne, by (means of) this argument. The means or instrument of an action is expressed by the ablative, without a preposition. This construction is called the Ablative of Means or Instrument (ablātivus instrūmentī). Cf. cōpiūs, exercitū, XXXIX; lēge, XXXII; auctōritāte, XXIX; lacū, flūmine, XXII; etc. App. 90; A. 248 c; G. 401; H. 420; P. 407.

2. iūsiūrandum, oath, is a compound noun, composed of iūs, a neuter noun of the third decl. and iūrandum, a neuter noun of the second declension. Both parts are inflected. The only plural forms are the nom. and accusative.

3. rēgnō occupātō, after they have seized the royal power (in their own tribes). Observe that the ablative absolute is here (as frequently) best rendered by a temporal clause. See on M. Messālā, etc. XIX, 3.

4. potīrī, to get the control of, contrary to its ordinary use, here takes its object, Galliae, in the genitive. What case does potior regularly govern? XX, 3.

5. sēsē posse spērānt, they hope they can. sēsē: for the number see XXXII, 1; for the case see XX, 2. posse: for the infin. and the trans. see XX, 1.

PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM PRIMUM

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. Review the declensions and the verb forms thus far presented especially in XXXIV, XXXVI.
2. Conjugation of sum, I am (esse, to be) in the subjunctive mode.

Tempus praesens

Singulāris	Plūrālis
si-m I may be (let me be) etc.	sī-mus
sī-s but see XXXVI, 3*.	sī-tis si-t	si-nt

Tempus imperfectum

3. The student will observe that the r of the tense sign of the imperfect subjunctive (XXXVI, Intr. n. 4) is assimilated to the preceding s of the stem and hence we have -sē for -rē.

Singulāris	Plūrālis
es-se-m I might be, etc. but	es-sē-mus
es-sē-s see XXXVI, 3*.	es-sē-tis es-se-t	es-se-nt

4. The PERFECT subjunctive in the passive voice is formed of the perfect passive participle and the present subjunctive of the verb sum, thus:

Singulāris	Plūrālis
amāt-us sim I may have been etc.	amāt-ī simus
amāt-us sīs but see XXXVI, 3*	amāt-ī sītis
amāt-us sit	amāt-ī sint

5. The PLUPERFECT subjunctive is formed of the perfect passive participle and the imperfect subjunctive of the verb sum, thus:

Singulāris	Plūrālis
amāt-us essem	amāt-ī essēmus
amāt-us essēs	amāt-ī essētis
amāt-us esset	amāt-ī essent

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. We may be in that kingdom at another time. 2. It is not doubtful that they will attempt the same. 3. They might have been loved by all. 4. You might have seized the royal power through these strong peoples. 5. The troops were influenced by his speech.

PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM SECUNDUM.

IMPERATIVE. PARTICIPLES, INFINITIVE, GERUND

The Latin imperative is found in the Present tense second person, and in the Future tense second and third persons. In each conjugation the present singular active is the same as the stem.

Vox Activa

Tempus praesens

Sing.	2.	amā	monē	tege	audi
Plūr.	2.	-ā-te	-ē-te	-i-te	-ī-te

Tempus futurum

Sing.	2.	amā-tō	monē-tō	tegi-tō	audi-tō
	3.	-ā-tō	-ē-tō	-i-tō	-ī-tō
Plūr.	2.	-ā-tō-te	-ē-tō-te	-i-tō-te	-ī-tō-te
	3.	-antō	-entō	-untō	-iuntō

The Present Singular of the imperative in the passive voice is the same as the Present infinitive of the active voice; and the Future forms are derived from the corresponding active forms by adding -r.

Vox Passiva

Tempus praesens

Sing.	2.	am-ā-re	mon-ē-re	teg-e-re	aud-ī-re
Praes.	2.	-ā-min-ī	-ē-mini	-i-mini	-ī-mini

Tempus futurum

Sing.	2.	amā-tor	monē-tor	tegi-tor	audi-tor
	3.	-ā-tor	-ē-tor	-i-tor	-ī-tor
Plūr.	2.	_____	_____	_____	_____
	3.	ama-ntor	mone-ntor	tegu-ntor	audi-untor

The Present and Future PARTICIPLES are active; the Perfect Participle and the Gerundive are passive. All these forms are declined like adjectives.

	Praesens	Futurum	Perfectum	Gerundivum
I	amāns	amātūrus	amātus	amandus
II	monēns	monitūrus	monitus	monendus
III	tegeōns	tēctūrus	tēctus	tegendus
IV	audiēns	auditūrus	auditus	audiendus

The Latin INFINITIVE is found in the Present, Perfect, and Future, active and passive.

	Vox	Activa
Praes.	amā-re	monē-re	tege-re	audi-re
Perf.	-āv-isse	-u-isse	tēx-isse	-iv-isse
Fut.	-ātūrum esse	-itūrum esse	tēctūrum esse	-itūrum esse

Vox Passīva

The Present passive infinitives are formed by substituting ī for the final e of the Present active, except in the third conjugation where ī takes the place of -ere.

Praes.	amā-rī	monē-rī	teg-ī	audi-rī
Perf.	-ātum esse	-i-tum esse	tēctum esse	-tūm esse
Fut.	-ā-tum īrī	-i-tum īrī	tēctum īrī	-tum īrī

For an explanation of the uses of the Gerundium (Gerund) see XXXII, 4, a.

I	amand-	{	-ī	Gen.
II	monend-		-ō	Dat.
III	tegend-		-um	Acc.
IV	audiend-		-ō	Abl.

The supines have the forms of the accusative and ablative singular of the fourth declension. For their use see XXXVIII 3.

I	amāt-	{
II	monit-		-um	Acc.
III	tēct-		-ū	Abl.
IV	audit-

1. Of the tenses which are given above and in XXXIV, 3-6 we have the following forms from the supine stem as exhibited in the perfect participle above.

a. The perfect passive infinitive by adding esse, to the perfect participle: thus, amātus esse, to have been loved.

b. The future active participle by adding -ūrus, -ūra, -ūrum, to the stem: thus, amāt-ūrum, about (purposing) to love.

c. By adding esse to the above (b) we have the future active infinitive: thus, amātūrum esse, to be about (or purposing) to love.

d. The future passive infinitive by adding īrī to the accusative of the supine: thus, amātum īrī, to be about (going) to be loved.

2. The student must remember that the participle has all the endings of the adjectives and these endings must conform to the number, gender, and case of the subject: thus, hominēs adductī sunt, the men were influenced; but mulierēs (the women) adductae sunt; sē parātōs esse dixerunt, they said they were prepared.

REVIEW TOPICS

Give the declension of is, sōlus, hīc, rēs, quī, and the comparison of mōbilis and dives. Recite the first person singular and plural of all tenses of vagor, dividō, habeo, dūcō. Explain Ablative Absolute, Direct Object, Indirect Object, Subject of the Infinitive, agreement of pronouns, Ablative of Cause. Give the characteristic vowels by which the conjugations are distinguished, and the ending of the present active infinitive of each. Recite the personal endings of the verb in the active voice. Tell how the Imperfect and Future Tenses are formed. Explain the formation and use of the Gerund. Recite the personal endings of the verb in the passive voice. Give the third person singular in all tenses in the passive voice of incolō, persuādeō and appellō. Give the ending of the Genitive singular of the fourth declension. Decline passus and lacus. Explain how deponent verbs differ from other verbs. State which cardinal numerals are not declined and how the hundreds are declined. Recite the personal endings of the Perfect Indicative. Give tense signs for Pluperfect and Future Perfect. Decline the Reflexive Pronoun, and explain its use. Distinguish between the Gerund and the Gerundive. State how duration of time is expressed. Give the first person singular and plural of sum in the present, imperfect, and future. Tell how the Perfect, Pluperfect, and Future Perfect tenses are formed in the passive voice. Explain use of the Ablative of Agent. State how time at or within which is expressed. Explain the use of the Dative with adjectives, Future Participle, Ablative of the Supine. Tell how means is expressed.

IV. THE ELEMENTS OF THE VERB.

The Verb is made up of the stem, signs of mode and tense, and the personal endings. The last include the signs of voice, person and number.¹

STEM. { The Present Stem is made up of the root and an added vowel, usually called the characteristic. Thus: am-ā-, mon-ē-, teg-e-, and aud-i-.

{ In the Pres. Ind. and the Imperative the personal endings are added to the stem.
 In the Imp. Ind. the syllable -bā- is inserted between the stem and personal endings.
 In the Fut. Ind. the syllable -bi²- is inserted between the stem and personal endings.
 In the Imp. Subj. the syllable -re- is inserted between the stem and personal endings.

MODE SIGN. In the Pres. Subj. the stem vowel becomes a mode sign: ē, (e)ā, ā, (i)ā.

Indicā vocābula ex hisce dēprōmpta:

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

This thing — this thing was reported — was reported to the Helvetians — was reported through (per) informers — the Helvetians reported — customs — in accordance with their customs — they compelled — they compelled Orgetorix — they compelled Orgetorix to plead his case — to plead his case from chains — I condemn — to condemn — I have condemned — condemned — it behooved — it behooved that the punishment follow the condemned (man) — that — that he be burned to ashes — that he be burned to ashes by fire — they condemned — they condemned Orgetorix — the oath and pledge — through this powerful people — his speech.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandatō:

1. These things were reported to the Helvetians through informers. 2. In accordance with their custom they compelled him to plead his case from chains. 3. (If) condemned it was necessary that the punishment follow. 4. They determined to burn Orgetorix to ashes. 5. They gave a pledge to each other so that he would be burned to ashes. 6. They hoped to be able by their own troops and their own army. 7. He persuaded Casticus to burn (that he should burn) the cart to ashes with fire.

Latīnē his respondētō:

Quōmodo es rēs ea ēnūntiāta? Quibus est rēs ea ēnūntiāta? Quōmodo coēgērunt Orgetorigem causam dicere? Quam poenam (what penalty) oportēbat sequī? In quō cāsū est mōribus? vinculis? causam? ignī? rēs?

NOTES

1. mōribus suis, in accordance with their customs. The phrase in accordance with is expressed in Latin by simply putting the noun in the ablative case. This construction is called the Ablative of Manner (App. 88; G. 399; P. 410 (2) or the Abl. of Specification (A. 253, N.) or the Abl. of Cause (H. 416).

2. damnātum . . . cremārētur, if condemned it was necessary that the punishment follow (him) of being burned by fire.

3. The perf. part. damnātum is here equivalent to a conditional clause, sī damnātus esset.

4. oportēbat, is an impersonal verb, i. e. without a personal subject. Here the subject is poenam sequī. App. 120; A. 145; G. 208; R. 2; P. 318 (4) r.

5. The clause ut ignī cremārētur is a substantive clause of result in apposition with poenam.

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

Day — on the day — on the day appointed — cause (or case) — of the case — of the pleading of the case — trial — to the trial — brought together to the trial — he brought together all his retinue — he brought together about ten thousands of men — Orgetorix brought — he led together — he led together all his retainers — all his retainers and debtors — who — of whom — he had — he had a number — he had a great number — I have a great number — he led together to the same place — through — through them — lest (that not)

— that he might not plead — that he might not plead his case — Orgetorix broke away — he hopes to break away — I announce the information — the penalty of chains — to consume with fire — they follow these customs.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. On the day appointed for the pleading (lit. of the pleading) of the case he brought to the same place all his retinue and two thousands of his debtors. 2. They determined to lead together from all sides about ten thousand debtors. 3. They had a great number of retainers. 4. Through them they broke away that they might not plead their case. 5. In accordance with their customs, they led together a great number of men. 6. He showed them that it was very easy to bring together a number of dependents.

Latīnē his respondētō:

Quō diē coēgit Orgetorix familiam suam ad iūdicium? Quī erant ad iūdicium praeter eōs? Quot hominēs erant in familiā Orgetorigis? Cūr eōs condūxit? Nōnne Orgetorix sē eripuit? NOTES

1. diē cōstitutā, on the day appointed. diēs, in the singular, is often feminine when referring to a fixed time (or to an indefinite period). cf. XXIII, 1. Constr.? XXXVII, 1.

2. ad milia decem, to the number of ten thousand. ad, with numerals is rendered about or to the number of.

3. sē: for the number see XXXII, 1.

4. nē causam diceret, to avoid pleading his case (that he might not plead his case). nē is the negative final conjunction and the subjunctive used thus, is called the Subjunctive of Purpose (subiunctivus finis) or the Subjunctive in a final clause (subiunctivus in incisiōne propositā.) App. 107; A. 317, 1; G. 545, 3; H. 497, II; P. 482, (1).

NOTES.

1. cum . . . cōnārētur, when the state (citizens) attempted. The temporal conj. cum is generally employed with the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive in a clause expressing the situation in which the main act or event (here Orgetorix mortuus est) takes place. This construction is called the Temporal Subjunctive (subiunctivus temporālis) or the Subjunctive in a temporal clause. App. 111; A. 325, a; G. 585; H. 521. cōgerent is connected with cōnārētur by the correlative conjunction -que and is therefore in the same construction.

In translating the temporal subjunctive the English indicative is employed, and not the auxiliaries of the English potential. See XXXVI, Intr. n. 3.

2. Distinguish cum, the preposition, from cum, the conjunction.

3. ut is followed by the indicative (arbitrābantur) and is therefore the adverb as. What part of speech is it when followed by the subjunctive? How translated? See XX, vocabulary.

4. quīn, meaning after expressions of doubt? XXXIX, Vocabulary.

5. Name the deponent verbs in this lesson. What is a deponent verb? XXVI, 2.

PENSUM QUADRAGESIMUM NONUM

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. The cardinal numbers from quattuor to centum are indeclinable. The inflection of ūnus is given in XX, Intr. n. 2: trēs is declined like the plural of adjectives of the third declension, as follows:

	M. and F.	N.
NOM.	trēs	tria
GEN.	trium	trium
DAT.	tribus	tribus
ACC.	trēs	tria
VOC.	trēs	tria
ABL.	tribus	tribus

2. The Interrogative (or Indefinite) pronoun quis (quī), who? which? (indefinite anyone, anything) is inflected in the singular as follows:

Nom.	quis (quī)	quae	quid (quod)
Gen.	cūius	cūius	cūius
Dat.	cui	cui	cui
Acc.	quem	quam	quid (quod)
Abl.	quō	quā	quō

The forms quis, quae, quid, are usually substantive. Quī and quod are usually adjective forms. The plural is the same as that of the relative. XXII, Intr. n. 1. Like quis inflect the universal pronoun, quisque, everyone, each, observing that the forms are the same with the addition of the enclitic -que.

NOTES

1. Rauricis, etc.: for the case see on XIX, 1.
2. finitimis: relation to the preceding nouns? XXXIII, 3.
3. utī is another form for ut. It can be distinguished from ūtī, to use, by the quantity of the first vowel, and by the connection.
4. utī . . . proficiscantur, to set out, to depart, a substantive clause of purpose, the direct object of persuādent. For a like use of purpose (final) clauses see ut exīrent (XX); ut occupāret (XXXV); ut cōnārētur (XXXVII). Contrast this with the purpose clause in XLVIII, 1.

The Raurici, who adopted the same plans, set out with the Tulingi. 5. The Boii, who dwell across the river, will storm Noreia. 6. Their neighbors crossed into the fields of the allies.

NOTES

1. quibus itineribus, by which. Caesar sometimes repeats the antecedent in the relative clause where English usage requires its omission.

2. Numeral adjectives like singuli, denoting how many apiece, or, how many each, are called distributives. They are inflected like the plural of magnus. A. 95 a; G. 295; H. 172, 3; P. 157 (3).

3. ut . . . possent, so that a very few could, etc. Pure clauses of Result (Consecutive clauses) express the result of the main verb (here impendēbat). This Subjunctive is called the Subjunctive of Result (subiunctīvus cōsecutiōnis) or the Subjunctive in a Consecutive clause (in incisiōne cōsecutiivā). A. 319, 1; G. 551 ff.; H. 500, 1, 2; P. 483. Contrast this Pure clause of Result with the result clause in XLIV, 5.

NOTES

1. omnibus rēbus comparātis; L. Pisōne . . . cōsulibus: for the abl. and its trans. see on XIX, 3 and XL, 3.

2. a. d. v. Kal. Apr.: from the Calends, time was reckoned backwards, and both extremes included. Thus, the fifth day before the Calends of April includes both the first of April and the twenty-eighth of March. A. 876; G. Appen.; H. 642; 660 (4). Here the logical construction would read "erat diēs quintus ante Kalendās Aprilēs," where ante is a prep. governing Kalendās in the acc., and Aprilēs is an adj. agreeing with Kalendās (the fifth day before the April Calends); but ante diem quintum, etc., grew to be a fixed form of expression which must be treated as an indeclinable noun, before which in or ex may stand; e. g. in a. d. v. Kal. Apr., where all that follows in is to be taken as an indeclinable noun governed by in, whereas the logical expression would be in diē quintō ante, etc.

5. concēdendum: supply esse. The gerundive with some form of the verb sum, expressed or understood, is used in Latin to express necessity or obligation. This is generally rendered by the use of the auxiliaries must or ought. Thus concēdendum nōn putābat, he did not think it was to be, or ought to be, granted. This forms what is called the second, or passive, periphrastic conjugation. App. 38; A. 113, d, N., 129; G. 143; H. 234; P. 229 (2).

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

A legion — with (by the help of) this legion — the legion which he had — he had with him — with the soldiers — who had assembled — who assembled — he constructs a ditch — he constructs a wall — a wall sixteen feet in height — a wall nineteen miles in length — from the lake — he constructs a wall from the lake to the river — when the work was finished (eō opere perfectō) — he stations garrisons — they station a garrison — the garrison is stationed — many garrisons were stationed.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. With one legion and with many soldiers whom he had with him, he constructed a wall nineteen miles long. 2. They will construct a wall from Mount Jura to Lake Geneva. 3. Lake Geneva flows into the river Rhone. 4. The trench was sixteen feet deep. 5. After finishing these fortifications, a period of time was taken for deliberating. 6. I wish to return to the garrison on the Ides of April.

Latīnē his respondētō:

Quot legiōnēs habēbat Caesar sēcum? Quot mīlitēs habēbat sēcum? (Nēsciō). Ad quem mōntem perdūcit mūrūm? Mōns Iūra quōrum finēs dīvidit? Quō in cāsū est quam? finēs? passuum? pedum? opere? praesidia? Quae est cōnstrūctiō nōminis opere? (Ablātivus absolūtus.)

NOTES

1. For the construction of legiōne see XL, 1; lacū, LVI, 1; opere, XL, 3.

2. ex prōvinciā, from (out of) the province. The ablative, commonly with a preposition, is used to denote the source from which anything is derived or proceeds. This construction is called the Ablative of Source (ablātivus originis). App. 84; A. 244; G. 390; H. 415; P. 405.

3. (in longitūdinem) milia . . . novem; in . . . sēdecim, to the length of nineteen miles; to the height of sixteen feet. For the genitives, passuum, pedum see XLIX, 1.

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

The fortification was completed — of stationing the garrison — a redoubt — he fortifies redoubts — that he can check them the more easily — if they attempt — against his will — against my will (mē invītō) — against the Helvetians' will — against your will (tē invītō, or vōbīs invītīs) — the day which he had appointed — he had appointed with the ambassadors — the day came — he denies that he can give — in accordance with the custom (mōre) — he shows that he will prohibit — disappointed in this expectation—having joined together boats—by forming many rafts—the rafts and boats.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. When this work was completed they stationed the garrison in the fort. 2. He could check (prohibere poterat) them if they attempted to cross against his will. 3. When those days which he had appointed with the soldiers came, he denied that he could give a way to any. 4. He showed that he would prohibit them if they attempted to use (facere) violence. 5. The Helvetians were disappointed in this expectation (spē). 6. When they had made several rafts, some of the Helvetians tried to cross the river which empties into the lake.

Latinē his respondētō:

Quod opus est perfectum? Quis commūnit castella? Cūr Caesar disposuit praesidia? Quid negābat Caesar sē facere posse? Quī erant animō dēiecti? Quae rēs iungēbant Helvētīi? Quid faciēbant? Nōnne complūrēs ratēs faciēbant? (Ita est, faciēbant ratēs complūrēs.)

NOTES

1. quō facilius prohibere possit, the more easily to check them. quō (=ut eō) rather than ut introduces a purpose clause whenever that clause contains a word in the comparative degree or involves a comparison. App. 107, c.; A. 317, b; G. 545, 2; H. 497, II; P. 482 (3); cf. LVIII, 2.

2. sē invitō, against his will (he being unwilling). In this ablative absolute an adjective (invitō) takes the place of the participle (as in opere perfectō, above) or the second noun (as in M. Messālā, etc., XIX). App. 98; A. 255 a; G. 409; H. 431, 4; P. 422 c.

3. Explain the infinitives trānsire (XXX, 1); prohibere; posse (XX, 1); prohibitūrum (esse). Give the construction of mōre (XLIV, 1); exemplō; ūllī; vim; spē (LVI, 1); nāvibus (XL, 3); ratibus.

Dicitō haec Latinē:

One way (road) remained — the way by (per) the Sequani — to go — they could not go — on account of the narrow pass — against his will — against the Sequanians' will — since they could not persuade these — willingly (of their own accord) — ambassadors were sent to Dumnorix — they send ambassadors — they send in order to (ut) get permission from the Sequani — Dumnorix was the intercessor — he made the attempt by day — let us not go by the narrow pass — we will go to our lesson.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. One way is left where they cannot go against the will of the Sequanians. 2. He cannot (is notable to) persuade them to do it of their own accord. 3. They sent an ambassador to Dumnorix to get permission from the Sequani. 4. With Dumnorix as their advocate they hope to obtain their request. 5. The fortifications were broken through by the onset of the soldiers.

Latinē his respondētō:

NOTES

1. relinquēbātur . . . via, there remained, etc. When the subject (here via) follows the verb the expletive there may be used to introduce the sentence.

2. Sēquanīs invītis, against the will of the Sequani, or if the Sequani should refuse. For the constr. see on sē invītō, LXII, 2.

Dicitō haec Latīnē:

Dumnorix was very powerful—he was powerful because of his popularity—by bribery—Dumnorix was a friend to the Helvetians—the daughter of Orgetorix—to marry the daughter of Orgetorix—Dumnorix was desiring a revolution—Dumnorix was wishing to have as many states (tribes) as possible—to have held under obligations—bound by benefits—therefore he undertakes the matter (rem)—he gets permission from the Sequani—so that they permit—the Sequani permit the Helvetians to go—he causes (perficit) them to give (ut dent) hostages—not to hinder the Helvetians—to cross without injury.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. The Helvetians were very powerful, but (sed) were not friends to the Romans. 2. Dumnorix married (led in marriage) the daughter of Orgetorix. 3. The people were influenced by a desire of royal power, and were eager for a revolution. 4. The men will desire to have as many states as possible under obligations (obstrictās) because of their kindness. 5. They obtained permission (impetrō) from the people, so that they permitted them to go through the fields. 6. Dumnorix caused hostages to be given between the Sequanians and the Helvetians. 7. They gained permission from the Sequani on account of their advocate, Dumnorix.

NOTES

1. grātiā et largitiōne, because of his popularity and lavish giving: suō beneficiō, because of his favors. The ablative (commonly without a preposition) is used to express cause. This construction is called the Ablative of Cause (ablātīvus causae). App. 85; A. 245; G. 408; H. 416; P. 404. Sometimes a preposition is used as prō glōriā, XXVII; quā dē causā, XI. sometimes a preposition with the accusative as propter angustias, LXV.

2. plūrimum poterat, was very powerful: cf. plūrimum possent XXXIX.

3. quam: for the use with superlatives see XXX, vocab.

5. Substantive clauses of Result are used as the objects of verbs denoting the accomplishment of an effort: thus, impetrat, ut . . . patiantur, he obtains permission, so that they allow, etc; and utī . . . dent perficit, he causes them to give (brings it about so that they give) etc., where ut . . . patiantur and utī . . . dent are Substantive clauses of Result, the objects of impetrat and perficit, respectively. App. 108, c; A. 332; G. 553, ff.; H. 501; P. 494. cf. the pure clause of result in LI, 3, and contrast with the object clause in L, 4.

6. obsidēs: hostages were persons given as a pledge for the fulfilment of the conditions of a treaty, and were subject to death if the conditions were violated.

It is reported to Caesar — it is reported that the Helvetians intend — to march through the country of the Sequanians — who are not far distant — which tribe (and this tribe) — if this should happen — he knew it would be — with great danger (attended with great danger) — with great danger to the province — that it should have warlike men — in places — in especially fruitful places — there were many places.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. The men reported to Caesar that the people intended (populō esse in animō) to march without mischief. 2. If these things should happen, they thought it would be attended with (cum) great danger. 3. Warlike men were the enemies of the Roman people and dwelt in fruitful places. 4. Dumnorix, who was very powerful among the common people, wished to bind the Tolosates by his kindness. 5. The liberality and popularity of Dumnorix were known to Caesar. 6. The Santones, who were not far away, desired a revolution. 7. The desire for royal power is (attended) with great danger to all men.

Latinē his respondētō:

Quibus erat in animō (Who intended) per agrum Sēquanōrum iter facere? Ubi habitābant Santonēs? Erantne Tolosātēs in prōvinciā Rōmānā? Quid intellegēbant futūrum esse periculōsum (dangerous)?

NOTES

1. Cæsari: Dative, indirect object of the verb renūntiātur. The Dative of the Indirect object (obiectum obliquum) regularly corresponds to the English Objective with to or for and indicates that the object is indirectly affected by the action. App. 60; A. 224–226; G. 345; H. 384; P. 374. This is the common use of the Dative; cf. Caesari, LVI; lēgātis, LIX.

2. renūntiātur: here used impersonally. The subject is the following clause.

3. Helvētiis esse in animō: for trans. and the constr. of esse see LVII, 3.

4. Sēquanōrum: the possessive genitive limiting agrum. The Possessive Genitive (genetivus possessiōnis) expresses the author or owner and corresponds to the English possessive or the objective with of. App. 57; A. 214, α; G. 362; H. 396, I; P. 352 (3). This genitive is a subdivision of the Subjective genitive and is the most common of the genitive constructions. Cf. ipsōrum, II; Belgārum, XII; Galliae, XV, and numerous other examples in the successive lessons.

5. intellegōbat . . . futūrum (esse), he knew it would be (attended) with great danger to the province (lit. with the great danger of the province). For the infin. see on XXI, 1. a. the subject of futūrum (esse) is the clause ut . . . habēret. b. futūrum has the neuter singular ending -um since clauses (or phrases) used substantively are regarded as of the neuter gender.

6. The adjective ending -ārius means pertaining to, belonging to, and is represented in English by the termination -arian or -ary; e. g. agrarius, agrarian; auxiliārius, auxiliary.

7. The adjective-ending -ōsus, denotes fulness, and in many cases is the equivalent of the English adjective-ending -ose, or -ous; e. g. belli-c-ōsus, full of war, bellicose; verb-ōsus, full of words, verbose; calamit-ōsus, calamitous.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. Lieutenants were placed over these fortifications. Caesar himself will hasten into farther Gaul. 3. The three legions, which were enlisted, were led forth from winter quarters. 4. They passed the winter about Aquileia in farther Gaul. 5. It is reported that these warlike men are passing the winter in the exposed part of Gaul.

NOTES

1. eī mūnitiōnī praefecit, he put in command of that fortification. The Dative of the Indirect object follows verbs compounded with ad, an- te, con, in, inter, ob, post, prae, prō, sub, super. Thus mūnitiōnī is the Dative with praefecit compound with prae (Dativus cum compositā prae. App. 62; A. 228; G. 347; H. 386; P. 377 (1). Cf. omnibus praestarent, XX; finitimis bellum inferre, XXIII; sibi suscepit, XXXIII.

2. māgnis itineribus, by forced marches. The Ablative, with an adjective in agreement or a limiting genitive or with the preposition cum, is used to describe the manner of an action. This ablative answers the question how and is called the Ablative of Manner (ablātivus modī). App. 88; A. 248 and Note; G. 401; H. 419, III; P. 410. Cf. māgnō cum periculō, LXVI.

3. cum his quinque legionibus: accompaniment is regularly denoted by the ablative with cum. App. 89; A. 248 a; G. 392; H. 419 I; P. 410 (1). This construction is called the Ablative of Accompaniment (ablātivus comitātus). Cf. sēcum, LXI.

Sequentia litteris Latinīs mandātō:

1. The Helvetians led their troops into the boundaries of the Aeduans and devastated their fields. 2. The Aeduans could not defend themselves and their property (sua) from the Helvetians. 3. The Aeduans sent men to him to ask help. 4. The Aeduans had so deserved of the Romans that their fields ought not to be laid waste. 5. Indirect Discourse is formally treated in the next lesson. The Indirect Discourse of this lesson should be reviewed after the formal study.

PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM

INDIRECT DISCOURSE

1. When the thought of a writer or speaker is reported, not in the words originally used, but with those words altered to suit the construction of the reporter's sentence, the altered language is called an indirect quotation, and the construction is called Indirect Discourse (ōrātiō obliqua). The indirect discourse naturally follows verbs and expressions signifying, to say, tell, inform, think, perceive, understand, know: i. e. verbs of saying or of mental action.

2. In Indirect Discourse a principal (declarative) clause has its subject in the accusative and its verb in the infinitive. Cf. (dīcunt) sē meritōs esse, (they say) that they have deserved, in the last lesson; also, biennium satis esse dūxērunt, they considered that two years were sufficient (XXXII); sē parātōs esse arbitrātī sunt, they thought they were prepared (XLVII); sēsē persuāsūrōs esse existimābant (LV); negat sē posse (LXII); etc. See XX, 1, 2. Observe that in the translation of these clauses the English idiom requires the nominative and indicative and usually the introductory conjunction that, although the Latin has no introductory word.

3. In Indirect Discourse all subordinate or imperative, clauses have their verbs in the subjunctive. e. g.

a. (dīcunt) sē ita meritōs esse, ut agrī vāstārī nōn dēbuerint, they say that they have so deserved that their fields ought not to have been laid waste (LXIX); sī vim cōnentur, (sē) prohibitūrum (esse) ostendit, he declares that he will stop them if they attempt (to use) force. Here ut . . . dēbuerint and sī . . . cōnentur are subordinate clauses in Indirect discourse and therefore have the verb in the subjunctive. If the subordinate verb was subjunctive in Direct Discourse it remains subjunctive in Indirect Discourse.

b. (Caesar) respondit, . . . ad Īd. Apr. revertentur, (Caesar) answered . . . that they should return about the middle of April. In Direct Discourse (ōrātiō rēcta) Caesar, in addressing the legates, naturally used the imperative, revertimini, return; but in Indirect Discourse this imperative becomes subjunctive.

c. No examples of interrogative clauses in Indirect Discourse occur in the text of BELLUM HELVETIUM excepting rhetorical questions implying their own answer which have their verb in the infinitive: e. g. num recentium iniūrārium memoriam dēpōnere posse, could he forget (or put away the recollection of) the recent wrongs. Other interrogative clauses have their verbs in the Subjunctive in Indirect Discourse.

4. The infinitives of the principal clause represent the time, present, past, or future, as related to the time of the principal verb.

dicit sē	{	audire	he says that he	{	hears audiri			is heard

dicit sē	{	audivisse	he says that he	{	heard or has heard audītum esse			has been heard dicit sē	{	audītūrum esse	he says that he	{	will hear audītum irī (or fore			will be heard ut audiātur)
dixit sē	{	audire	he said that he	{	heard or has heard audirī			was heard or has been heard dixit sē	{	audivisse	he said that he	{	had heard audītum esse			had been heard dixit sē	{	audītūrum esse	he said that he	{	would hear audītum irī (or fore			would be heard (or futūrum esse)
		ut audiātur)

5. The tense of the verb in the subordinate clause also depends on the verb of saying (or mental action) according to the law of the Sequence of Tenses.

In this relation, the tenses are divided into primary (or principal) and secondary (historical) as follows:

Primary	{	present	Secondary	{	imperfect future			perfect (historical) perfect (definite)			pluperfect future perfect

The rule for the Sequence of Tenses is:

Primary tenses (in the principal clause) are followed by primary tenses (in the subordinate clause) and secondary tenses by secondary tenses. Thus (text of LVIII) the perfect historical respondit is followed by secondary tenses vellent and reverterentur in the subordinate clauses.

Other illustrations of the Sequence of Tenses will be found in the following lessons.

6. Verte in Anglicum:

1. Legiōnem habeō. 2. Dicit, "legiōnem habeō." 3. Dicit sē legiōnem habere. 4. Dicit sē legiōnem habuisse. 5. Dicit sē legiōnem habitūrum esse. 6. Dicit sē legiōnem habere (he will say that he has). 7. Dicit sē legiōnem habuisse. 8.

Dicet sē habitūrum esse. 9. Dīxērunt sē ire (they said that they were going). 10. Dīxērunt militēs īvisse. 11. Dīxērunt hominēs itūrōs esse. 12. Arbitrātur obsidēs dari. 13. Arbitrātur obsidēs datōs esse. 14. Arbitrātur obsidēs datum iri (futūrum esse or fore ut obsidēs dentur).

Rem. The future passive infinitive is rarely used in Latin and the paraphrase of the future infinitive of sum with a result clause (as indicated in the parenthesis) may be used instead.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. He says it is very easy to get control of the government.
2. They said it was very easy to accomplish their attempts.
3. They think they will easily prohibit them. 4. They thought they would easily prohibit them. 5. They said they intended (LVII 3,) to march through their province because they had no other way. 6. We intend (nōbis est etc.) to march through the province because we have no other way. 7. If you wish (sī vultis) anything you can (potestis) easily return. 8. He says that if you wish anything you can easily return. 9. He said that if they wished anything they could easily return. 10. It happened that they roamed widely. 11. He said it happened that they roamed widely. 12. He thought he would take a day for deliberating. 13. He thinks a day will be taken (6, rem.) for deliberating. 14. He thought a day would be taken for deliberating.

Rem. If "he" or "they" in Ind. Disc. means the same person as the subject of the verb of saying (or mental action) the reflexive sē must be employed (XXXII, 1); if "he" or "they" in Ind. Disc. refers to a different person from the subject, the demonstrative eum (eōs) must be used.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Caesar was informed by the Aedui that they could not restrain (prohibēre) the violence of the men. 2. When these things had been pointed out (abl. abs.) Caesar determined that he ought not to wait. 3. The Allobroges went to Caesar and informed him that nothing was left. 4. Since the fields were devastated and the goods of their allies destroyed, they determined to wait until their near friends (necessārii) arrived. 5. At the same time the Aedui said their children ought not to be led away into slavery. 6. Thus the town was stormed almost in sight of the Romans. 7. He knew that the enemy would ravage and devastate their fields.

Latinē his respondētō:

Quī faciunt Caesarem certiōrem? Cūr nōn poterant vim hostium ab oppidīs prohibēre? Fugā ad Caesarem quī sē recēpērunt? Quid dēmōstrant Allobrogēs Caesarī? Expectāvitne Caesar? Quid Caesar statuit? Quae est cōstrūctiō tempore? agrīs? oppidīs? fugā? rēbus? fōrtūnis? Quō in tempore est faciunt? habēbant? recipiunt? statuit? pervenīrent? Quae particula sermōnis est sēsē? agrīs? facile? trāns? reliquī? solum? adductus?

Inflect the nouns tempore; vim (LV, Intr. n.); hostium; vīcōs; fugā. Give the construction of tempore; Aeduōrum; Caesarem; sēsē; agrīs; oppidīs; hostium; possessiōnēs; solum; Santonōs, (LXX, 3). Explain the mode of prohibēre, (LXXII, 2); esse; expectandum (esse); pervenīrent (LX, 2).

NOTES

1. sibi ... esse, that they have nothing (lit., that there is to them nothing). The dative (here sibi) is employed with some form of esse to denote possession. This construction is called the Dative of Possession

(dativus possessiōnis). App. 66; A. 231; H. 387. Cf. sibi esse in animō, that it was their intention or they had the intention (LVI); Helvētis esse in animō, that the Helvetians had the intention (LXVI).

2. nihil esse reliquī, that nothing is left (lit., that there is nothing or no part of a remainder). This construction, where the genitive denotes the whole, of which a part is taken, is called the Partitive Genitive (genetivus partitivus). App. 56; A. 216; G. 369; H. 397. Cf. quārum ūnam (II); hōrum fortissimī (V); nōbillissimōs civitātis (LVIII).

3. nōn exspectandum (esse) sibi, that he must not wait (lit., that it must not be awaited by himself). The dative (here sibi) is employed with the Gerundive to denote the person on whom the necessity rests. This construction is called the Dative of Agent (dativus agentis). App. 65; A. 232; G. 355; H. 388.

*The dictation exercises will hereafter be omitted, as teachers and pupils have become familiar with the plan. It is hoped the practice will be continued in each lesson. Mere translation is by no means the whole work of the student. At no stage in the study of Latin should the student fall below the standard of the ability to render short passages into Latin or English when either language is pronounced. This ability is to be secured and maintained only by continued daily dictation exercises on the general plan heretofore pursued.

legiōnibus? trādūxisse? (Est perfectum infinitivī, orātiōne obliquā cum certior factus est.) possit? (Est subiunctivus cōsecutiōnis.)

NOTES

1. fluat is in the subjunctive because in an indirect question. The direct question would be, in utram partem fluit? A direct question is a question directly asked; e. g., How old is he? An indirect question is a question so incorporated into another sentence as to have lost its directly interrogative form; e. g., I know how old he is; Will you tell me how old he is? Here the word how is still interrogative, though the clause which it introduces has lost the question form. Indirect questions require the subjunctive. App. 114; A. 334; G. 467; H. 529, I; P. 518.

2. trēs . . . trādūxisse, that the Helvetians had conveyed three parts (or fourths) of their troops across this river. Of the compound verb trādūxisse, the simple verb governs partēs while flūmen is the object of trāns in composition. A. 239 2 b; G. 331; H. 376.

3. explōrātor: nouns ending in -tor denote the agent or doer, and are of the masculine gender. They are formed by adding -or to the stem of the perfect participle with the stem vowel omitted; e. g. āct-or from āctus the perfect part. of agō; conductor, from condūcō, perf. part. conductus.

4. vigiliā: watch. The Romans, for military purposes, divided the night, from sunset to sunrise, into four equal watches (vigiliae), called prima nox, nox concubia (ending at midnight); nox media, and gallinicum.

Rem. The student may reproduce the direct discourse (orātiō rēcta) by putting himself in the place of the speaker and using the persons and modes naturally employed. Thus the speaker uses the first person (of himself and others associated with himself); the second person of those he addresses; the indicative in declarative clauses, and so on.

NOTES

Compare the direct discourse given in the answer to the last question with the indirect discourse in the text of the lesson. Note each word in which a change is made and explain the change according to the principles stated in LXX and in the Rem. and notes of the last lesson.

1. insidiīs nīterentur, trust in strategems or rely upon ambuscades. The ablative is used with nītor (and innītor). This is explained as an ablative of means, G. 401, N. 6; P. 420 or as (a figurative) ablative of place, H. 425 II; A. 254 b.

2. patribus; calamitāte: LX, 2.

PENSUM SEPTUAGESIMUM OCTAVUM

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

The tenses formed from the present stem (es-) of the verb sum (esse) are given in the intr. notes of XXXIV and XLI.

The tenses formed from the perfect stem fu- are as follows:

INDIC.	SUBJ.	INFIN.
---------------	--------------	---------------

Tempus Perfectum

Sing. fuī. I was (have been) etc. fuērim, etc. fuisse, to have been.

Plusquamperfectum

Sing. fueram, I had been, etc. fuissem, etc.

Fūturum Exāctum

Sing. fuerō, I shall have been etc.

1. They will learn to rely upon deceit. 2. Wherefore, I permit all to endure this punishment. 3. Caesar replied to Divico: "I hesitate the less because I hold in memory those things which you have called to mind." 4. Caesar endured it with the more annoyance the less deservedly it had happened to the Roman people. 5. If the Roman people had been conscious (to itself) of any wrong it would not have been difficult to take precautions.

Latīnē hīs respondētō:

Cūī respondit Caesar? Cūr sibi minus dubitātiōnis dabātur? Quās rēs tenēbat Caesar memoriā? Cūr ferēbat eās rēs gravius? Num populus Rōmānus alicūius iniūriæ erat sibi cōnsciū? Quārē est populus Rōmānus dēceptus? Quæ essent verba Caesaris orātiōne in rēctā? (Verba Caesaris orātiōne in rēctā hæc essent: "Eō mihi minus dubitātiōnis datur, quod eās rēs, quās vōs lēgātī Helvētiōrum commemorāvistis memoriā teneō, atque eō gravius ferō, quō minus meritō populī Rōmānī accidērunt: quī, sī alicūius iniūriæ sibi cōnsciū fuisset, nōn fuit difficile cavēre.)

Following the Rem. in LXXVI and the principles stated in LXX, reconstruct the direct discourse from the text of the lesson and compare results with the answer to the last question.

Explain the mode of darī, LXX, 2; commemorāssent, LXX, 3 a; tenēret; ferre; accidissent; fuisse.

NOTES

1. minus dubitātiōnis, the less hesitation. For the Gen. see on LXXI, 2.

2. commemorāssent: uncontracted form? L, 7.

3. eō gravius, quō minus . . . accidissent; he was the more annoyed, the less deservedly they had befallen the Roman people. eō . . . quō, the . . . the. The ablative is employed with comparatives (here gravius and minus) or with words involving a comparison to denote the degree or measure of difference. This construction is called the Ablative of the Degree of Difference (ablātīvus mēnsuræ). App. 92; A. 250; G. 403; H. 423; P. 415. Cf. eō minus in first line of text and quō facilius, LXII,

4. quī sī, and if it (the Roman people). The relative (quī) when used to connect independent statements is best translated by a conjunction and a demonstrative or personal pronoun.

5. alicūius . . . fuisset, had been conscious to itself of any wrong. a. alicūius: the indefinite pronoun aliquis is inflected like quis, XLIX. Intr. n. 2. b. cōnsciūs: governs iniūriæ, XXV, 2; and sibi, XXXVII, 2. c. fuisset: the Subjunctive in a conditional clause, contrary to fact.

The answer to the last question represents the direct discourse as reconstructed from the text of the lesson. Note and justify each change according to the principles stated in LXX.

NOTES

1. eō dēceptum (esse), they had been deceived by this.
2. (aliquid) commissum (esse), that anything had been done.
3. ā sē, by themselves, XXXV, 1. timēret: LXXII, 1.

4. timendum: sc. esse. What constr. is thus formed? LX, 5. The construction is impersonal, it was to be feared, but it is generally better to render the impersonal Latin verb by the personal construction: nor did they (populus Rōmānus) think they ought to fear without reason.

5. contumēliae: LXXVI, 3.

6. vellet: for inflection see next lesson.

7. num etiam recentium iniūriarum memoriam dēponere posse, could he also put aside the recollection of the recent wrongs? num posse, could he? For infin. see on LXX, 3 d.

8. tentāssent: cf. commemorāssent in last lesson.

9. eō invītō, against his will. Constr.? LXII, 2.

1. Caesar said that the gods sometimes grant prosperity to the wicked. 2. They do this in order that men may live more bitterly because of (ex) a change in their condition (rerum). 3. The gods wish to take vengeance on men for their crimes. 4. The men, whom the gods wish to punish, are often granted quite long freedom from punishment. 5. Caesar grieved because they boasted of their victories. 6. They have not inflicted injuries for a long time.

NOTES

1. cōsuēsse: contracted from cōsuēvisse. The perfect tense of this verb has a present signification. Thus, cōsuēsse, to be accustomed and (Caesar dixit) cōsuēsse etc., Caesar said that the immortal gods are (not had been) accustomed.

2. secundiōrēs rēs, a considerable degree of prosperity. diūturniōrem, quite long. Observe that the comparative may be rendered by too, quite, rather, considerable, or any term expressing a comparison.

Although these things are so, yet if hostages are given to me by you, that I may know that you will do those things which you promise, I will make peace. 3. Divico replied that his people were so trained by their ancestors that they were accustomed to receive hostages. 4. When this reply had been given, Divico departed from the place.

Latinē his respondētō.

Deinde (then) quid fēcit Divicō?

The answers to the first and second questions show what were probably the exact words of the speakers. Contrast with the ōrātiō obliqua of the text and explain the changes according to the principles stated in LXX and illustrated in the preceding lessons.

Explain the case of iīs, XXXV, 1; ipsīs, sociīs, LXVII, 1; iīs, LXVII, 3; rei, respōnsō, XL, 3.

NOTES

1. cum ... sint, although these things are so. cum concessive (though, although) is followed by the Subjunctive. App. 112, b; A. 326; G. 587; H. 515 III; P. 570 (2). What is the construction with cum temporal? with cum causal?

2. sī Aeduīs ... item sī Allobrogibus satisfaciant, if they would make amends to the Aeduans ... and likewise if to the Allobroges. Verbs modified by or compounded with satis (also bene and male) govern the dative of the indirect object. Thus Aeduīs and Allobrogibus are governed by satisfaciant. App. 62, Rem.; A. 227 e 2; H. 384, II 4 N. 1.

3. cōnsuērint: LII, 3.

From this point the text will be given connectedly with vocabulary and notes instead of being divided into pensa as heretofore. The exercises for writing are placed at the end of each chapter and may be divided in the assignment of lessons at the discretion of the teacher.

15. amplius . . . mīlibus passuum, more than five or six miles.

After the comparative amplius, quam (than) is omitted, though supplied in translating. When quam is thus omitted after a comparative, the following noun is in the ablative. A. 247; G. 398; H. 417; P. 416. Numeral adjectives like quīnī and sēnī are called distributives. Here they are used to indicate that the two armies were this distance apart each day. interesset; LII, 3.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. On the next day the Helvetians moved their camp three miles. 2. All the cavalry were sent in advance by Caesar to see where the enemy would march. 3. Caesar's horsemen followed the rear of the Helvetians too eagerly, and engaged in battle in an unfavorable place. 4. He said that a few of his (men) fell. 5. We promise to instruct the witnesses. 6. They satisfied the enemy by this reply and departed from the place. 7. The Helvetians were elated by this battle, because five hundred of their horsemen put to flight so great a multitude of Roman soldiers. 8. After these things they resisted boldly, and attacked our men on the rear. 9. Caesar's men were restrained from battle by him. 10. He deems it (habet) sufficient for the present to keep the soldiers of the enemy from plunder and foraging. 11. On the next day the cavalry of the enemy was sent in advance. 12. A few who followed too eagerly, fell among the enemy. 13. The place was unfavorable for the army. 14. They marched so that the two armies were not more than five or six miles apart. 15. The rear of the enemy and our van-guard marched thus about fifteen days.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Caesar will demand of the Aeduans the grain which they promised. 2. The enemy, who resisted so boldly, were put to flight. 3. For the present they will subsist (vivent) by plunder, pillaging, and foraging. 4. The Aeduans publicly promised to bring grain to Caesar. 5. As was said before, in the first chapter, Gaul slopes toward the north. 6. Caesar thought that not even a sufficiently great supply of fodder was at hand. 7. The grain in that place was not ripe, because of the cold. 8. Caesar turned away from the Saone because he wished to follow up the Helvetians. 9. For this reason he was not able to use the grain. 10. Caesar's ships were bringing the grain on the river Saone. 11. Caesar was put off from day to day by the Aeduans. 12. The Aeduans said that the grain was being collected and was being carried to Caesar. 13. The Aeduans put off Caesar too long. 14. It was necessary for Caesar to measure out grain to his men. 15. Liscus, who was over the highest office, was called vergobret by the Aeduans. 16. The vergobrets were appointed annually and had the power of life and death over their people (in suōs). 17. Diviciacus and Liscus were among the chief men whom Caesar called together. 18. The Aeduan chieftains were severely censured by Caesar because they did not assist him with grain. 19. Since he could neither buy grain nor take it from the fields, it was necessary that he be aided by them. 18. Caesar thought he ought to be aided in so critical a time, with the enemy so near. 20. Caesar said that he had undertaken the war influenced in a great measure (māgnā ex parte) by their entreaties. 21. Caesar was complaining the more bitterly because he had been abandoned. 22. The vergobret, who holds (is over) the highest office, will measure the grain.

* Hereafter the questions in Latin will be omitted. The general plan of questioning in Latin so as to go over the text, which has been first read, then translated, then gone over in the dictation exercise, has been so well illustrated as not to require further space. The Glossary will supply terms necessary for an explanation of the constructions in Latin. It is earnestly hoped that the omission of the questions will not abate their use by teacher or student. The dictation exercise, questions, and translating of English into Latin are essential to a real mastery of the subject. Hurrying over the text by merely giving the translation is not making haste in learning the language.

Dumnorix increased his property by buying the revenues (the revenues having been bought up). 9. We perceive how great a danger it is to restrain the council. 10. Liscus, who was detained, pointed out the only way. 11. The estate of Dumnorix was increased in this manner (modus). 12. Abundant (māgnus) resources for bribing were procured by him. 13. If we support the cavalry at our own expense we shall have it near us. 14. They are very powerful not only among the Bituriges but also among other tribes. 15. He gave his female relatives (l. 18) in marriage to noted, influential men. 16. The mother, sister, and other female relatives of Dumnorix were all given in marriage by him. 17. The duties and taxes can be bought up at a small price. 18. If no one dares to purchase we shall not bid. 19. He favored the Helvetians because he had married (led in marriage) the daughter of their chief (prīnceps). 20. Dumnorix hates the Romans because he thinks his influence is lessened by their arrival. 21. Dumnorix thought his brother would be restored to (in) his former place of honor. 22. He had the highest expectation (came into the highest hope) of getting possession of the kingdom by means of (per) the Helvetians. 23. Under the rule of the Romans he despaired of the influence which he had. 24. Dumnorix and his cavalry began the flight (made the beginning of the flight) in the unsuccessful cavalry battle. 25. The Aedui had placed Dumnorix in command of the cavalry which they sent as an aid to Caesar. 26. Dumnorix thought that the flight of his men would terrify the rest of the cavalry. 27. The flight was made in order that the rest of the cavalry might be terrified.

Caesar counsels with Divitiacius concerning his brother Dumnorix.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Caesar was informed that Dumnorix had led the Helvetians through the boundaries of the Sequanians. 2. He had done all these things without his order and also without the knowledge of the Aeduans. 3. Having learned these things, he determined to punish him because he thought there was sufficient cause. 4. The remarkable devotion and rectitude of his brother Diviciacus was opposing this. 5. Caesar feared that the punishment of Dumnorix would wound the feelings of his brother. 6. They had favored and desired this alliance. 7. I think his former honor was not lessened but restored. 8. He is greatly frightened and despairs because of the unfavorable cavalry battle. 9. Diviciacus was called by him in order that he might speak with him concerning what the others had said. 10. Valerius, the interpreter, was not removed with the other interpreters. 11. Caesar had the highest confidence in Troucillus in all things. 12. He said that in the conference in his presence (apud sē) each one had spoken many things. 13. Caesar besought and urged Diviciacus, after examining the case (abl. abs.), either himself to decide or to order the state to decide. 14. He learned that the punishment was without their knowledge or order. 15. They fear to oppose this remarkable devotion, rectitude, and prudence.

Dumnorix had grown in wealth and power although (quamquam) formerly he had very little influence. 4. He used this power for diminishing the popularity of his brother. 5. Brotherly affection influenced Diviciacus to ask these things. 6. Let us inform the interpreter before Valerius calls anyone. 7. I will ask these separately and urge them without offence. 8. At the same time he conversed with many others. 9. If anything shall have befallen him rather severe, the people will think it was done at my desire. 10. From this thing it will come to pass that all will turn away from me. 11. He said this because he was an intimate friend of Caesar. 12. While he was weeping, Caesar grasped his hand and comforted him. 13. Having shed many tears, he made an end of beseeching. 14. He besought Caesar to pardon his brother. 15. His favor was of so much importance to Caesar that at his desire he forgave the wrong to the state. 16. When Diviciacus had been summoned he disclosed everything which he knew about his brother. 17. Caesar said to Dumnorix: I warn you in the future to avoid every suspicion: I will forgive the past for the sake of your brother, 18. Having placed guards, in order that he might know what he would do, he departed.

Explain the construction of each of the infinitives in this chapter and the subjunctives not mentioned in the notes.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Caesar thought it was necessary to measure out grain to his (men) on the following day. 2. Bibracte, a large and wealthy town of the Aedui, was distant about (ad) eighteen miles. 3. Caesar turned away his line of march (iter) in order that he might look out for supplies. 4. The runaway slave reported to the Helvetians that Caesar was pushing on (contendō) to Bibracte. 5. I do not believe that the Romans were thoroughly overcome (perterreō) by fear. 6. The day before, the Romans did not engage in battle when they had seized the higher places (abl. abs.). 7. The Helvetians fully trusted that they could cut off the Romans from supplies. 8. Therefore (itaque) they completely changed their plan, and reversed their line of march. 9. Our men were harassed on the rear by the enemy. 10. I begin to understand (intellegō) the plan of the Helvetians.

Caesar prepares for battle. The Helvetians advance to the attack.

24. Postquam id animum advertit, cōpiās suās Caesar in proximum collem subdūcit equitātumque, quī sustinēret hostium impetum, misit. Ipse interim in colle mediō triplicem aciem instrūxit legiōnum

Infect together capitō mōnte, succēdentibus nostris. Note the number of participial (absolute) constructions and remember that in translating, a clause is frequently required.

Sequentia litteris Latīnis mandātō:

1. The danger of all was made equal by Caesar, who removed his own (horse) and the horses of all the officers (praefecti militum) out of sight. 2. He did this in order that the hope of flight might be taken away, and he encouraged his men to engage in battle. 3. By hurling javelins (abl. abs.) from their higher position, our soldiers easily broke through the phalanx of the enemy. 4. The phalanx of the Helvetians was easily dispersed, and the Romans began to attack them with drawn swords. 5. It was a hindrance to the Helvetians that many of their shields were pierced through by one thrust of the javelin. 6. The iron point (ferrum) of the javelin bent back so that it could not be pulled out of the shields. 7. The shields were carried (ferō) with the left hand. 8. Caesar said that the Helvetians could not fight conveniently because the left hand was hindered. 9. This is a great hindrance to me, because I cannot pull out the iron point of the pilum. 10. One thrust of the javelin often pierced through the shield. 11. I can fight even if (etiamsi) my left hand is hindered. 12. Many of the enemy exerted (jactō) the arm in vain (frūstrā) for a long time and then (deinde) threw down their shields and fought with their bodies unprotected. 13. The Helvetians, exhausted with wounds, retreated to the mountain which was near. 14. When our men came up (abl. abs.) to the mountain, the Boii and Tulingi attempted to surround them. 15. About fifteen thousand men marched (iter faciō) with them, in order that they might be a protection to the rear. 16. This was seen by the Helvetians, who again pressed on (instō) and renewed the battle. 17. The Romans faced about and advanced against them in two divisions. 18. The conquered and dislodged Gauls were resisted by the first and second lines.

They are routed and flee northward. Caesar pursues.

1. The Helvetians for a long time fought a doubtful battle.
2. Some of the enemy began to retreat to the mountain; others were gathering (cōferō) at their wagons because they thought they could not withstand the attack of our soldiers.
3. They fought about the baggage from the seventh hour far into the night.
4. A retreating (āversus) enemy was seen by no one, although the battle lasted until evening.
5. When they hurled javelins at (in) our men, who were advancing, they wounded some. 6. Pikes and darts were hurled from below, between the wheels of the wagons. 7. They fought several hours before (prius quam) the Romans obtained possession of the Gauls' camp. 8. They captured Orgetorix's son and daughter, who were in the camp. 9. Many thousands of Helvetians who survived this battle set out on the march, and after (post) three days arrived (having set out, arrived) in the boundaries of the Lingones. 10. The Romans could not pursue them on the same night, because many of the soldiers were wounded. 11. Caesar said to the Lingones: "Do not aid the Helvetians with grain or anything. If you shall have aided them, I shall consider you in the same position in which I consider the Helvetians." 12. After an interval of three days all the troops followed.

2. quī cum, when these (ambassadors). For trans. cf. LXXVIII, 4.

5. quō tum essent, where they (the Helvetians) then were. This clause depends on the subjunctive clause atque (cum) . . . iūssisset and, regarded as an integral part of the clause, has its verb attracted to the Subjunctive. This construction is called the Subjunctive by Attraction. A. 342; G. 663; H. 529 II; P. 523.

arma, servōs, quī ad eōs perfūgissent, poposcit. Dum ea conquīruntur et cōferuntur, nocte intermissā, circiter hominum mīlia vi eius pāgī, quī Verbigēnus appellātur, sive timōre perterritī, nē armīs trāditis supplicio afficerentur, sive spē salutis inductī, quod in tantā multitudīne dēditiciōrum suam fugam aut occultārī aut omnīnō ignōrārī posse existimārent, primā nocte ē castrīs Helvētiōrum ēgressī ad Rhēnum finēsque Germānōrum contendērunt.

7. servus, -ī, m., slave, servant per-fugiō, -ere, fūgi, fugitus [fugiō, flee], n., flee for refuge, take refuge in; desert poscō, -ere, poposci [of. precor, ask], a., ask, demand, request (stronger than petō, less strong than flagitō)
 8. con-quirō, -ere, quīsivī, quīsītus [quaerō, search], a., seek for carefully, search for, hunt up
 9. Verbigēnus, -ī, m., one of the four clans of the Helvetii
 10. trā-(trāns-) dō, dere, didī, dītus [trāns + dō, give], a., give across or over, give up, surrender; intrust, confide; hand down, transmit 11. salūs, salūtis [salveō, be well], f., health, welfare; preservation, security, safety dēditicius, -a, -um [dēdō, surrender], surrendered, subject; as subst., one surrendered (formally), prisoner

12. occultō, 1. [freq. of occulō, hide], a., hide, secrete; keep secret, conceal

ignōrō, 1. [ignārus, not knowing] a., not know, be ignorant of, be unacquainted with; fail to observe, overlook: pass., be unobserved, unrecognized

13. ēgredior, -gredi, -gressus [gradior, step], a., n., step or go out, come forth, depart; march out, make a sortie; land (from a ship), disembark

7, 8. quī perfūgissent, who had fled (i. e. if any had fled). The relative clause here is used with the Subjunctive to define or characterize the antecedent (servōs) in a supposable case. This construction is called the Subjunctive in a Relative Clause of Characteristic. App. 109; A. 320; H. 503 I; P. 500. dum . . . cōferuntur, while these were being sought out and brought together. dum, while, is used with the pres. ind. in referring to past events and must be translated by the impf. indic. ea is used inclusively for obsidēs, arma, servōs. The masculine tī (eī) may also be used when the adjective refers to different genders of living beings and also to things without life, or the adjective may agree with the nearest noun. App. 18; A. 187 2 b, n; H. 430 2 n; P. 336.

9. quī Verbigēnus appellātur, which is called Verbigenus. Contrast this relative clause, which states a fact, with the relative clause in 7, 8 above. Verbigēnus: LXXIII, 2.

10, 11. timōre nē, by the fear that. For trans. of nē see on Ch. 19, 11.

Give the construction of dēditōne (LXIV, 1); pedēs (LXVIII, 3); supplicio (XL, 1); nocte; castris; finēs.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. The legates said that they were influenced by the scarcity of grain. 2. The surrender was made towards evening at the tenth hour. 3. The ambassadors met Caesar on the way and cast themselves at his feet. 4. Some spoke humbly, others wept, all asked for peace. 5. Caesar said that the Helvetians must remain where they then were, and await his arrival. 6. The Helvetians obeyed Caesar because they feared him. 7. When Caesar had come to them, he demanded all the slaves who had deserted to them. 8. The Helvetians brought to Caesar those things which he had demanded. 9. Several (nōnnūllus) thousand men who were overcome (perterritus) by fear that they would suffer punishment if they gave up their arms, departed from the camp in the early part of the night. 10. These men thought that their flight would be easily concealed or entirely overlooked. 11. Caesar was not ignorant that these men had gone.

17, 18. parem . . . atque . . . erant, the same as they themselves were in (or such as they themselves enjoyed.). atque (āc) generally means as or than after words of likeness and comparison. The origin of this use of atque may, perhaps, be shown thus: Tu es in pari servitutis condiciōne atque ego (Latin idiom). Ego atque tu in pari servitutis condiciōne sumus (Eng. idiom).

Inflect together frūgibus amissis, eā ratiōne, suis finibus, petentibus Aeduīs, parem condiciōnem; beginning with the nom. sing. Inflect in full the verb iūssit.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. Caesar ascertained that the deserters had gone through the boundaries of the neighboring peoples. 2. Caesar said: "Search them out and bring them back if you wish to be blameless in my sight." 3. He commanded that they should be treated as (held in the number of) enemies. 4. All the rest were received in capitulation after they had given up (abl. abs.) the deserters and hostages. 5. The Helvetians and other tribes (populus) had set out from their own boundaries. 6. When Caesar ordered them to return, they did so, although there were no crops at home. 7. Caesar commanded the Allobroges: "Furnish (faciō) the Helvetians with a supply of grain." 8. They themselves, having burned their towns and villages, were ordered by Caesar to restore them. 9. He was doing these things especially for this reason, because he was unwilling that the Germans should dwell in the Helvetians' territory. 10. He did not wish the Germans to be neighbors to the friends of Rome. 11. They asked Caesar to permit them (ut sibi liceat) to place (ut c. subj.) the Boii in their territory because they knew them to be of eminent valor (abl. characteristic). 12. The Boii received fields from the Aeduans, and afterward equal terms of independence.

Read over the sketch of this eventful campaign at the beginning of this book.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. The lists, which were brought to Caesar, were written in Greek characters. 2 The number of those who had gone from home was written on the lists. 3 The names of the soldiers who could bear arms were not on the same lists with those of the women and children. 4. Caesar states (dīcō) that three hundred and sixty-eight thousand of these had left their homes, and that ninety-two thousand could bear arms. 5. Caesar ordered his men to find out how great a number of them returned to their homes. 6. They reported that the number was one hundred and ten thousand. 7. More than (plūs quam) two hundred thousand persons (capita) perished (were lost) in this war. 8. This closes (fīniō) the account (narrātiō) of the war with the Helvetians.

SUPPLEMENTARY LESSON I

This and the following lesson include important grammatical subjects not conveniently or completely presented in the text upon which the preceding lessons are based. They are presented with the exercises as essential to a complete statement of the elements of Latin Grammar. They may be omitted, at the discretion of the teacher, until these points are found in the further study of Latin.

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES (Sententiae Conditionālēs)

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. A conditional sentence consists of two clauses; the condition (protasis) and the conclusion (apodosis).

2. The classes of conditions are as follows.

a. SIMPLE, implying nothing as to fulfillment;

The Indicative is used both in condition and conclusion. sī valēs, bene est, if you are in good health, it is well.

b. VIVID FUTURE:

The future (or future perfect) is used in both clauses. sī valēbis, gaudēbō, if you are (shall be) well, I shall be glad.

c. LESS VIVID FUTURE:

The present (or perfect) Subjunctive is used in both clauses. sī valeās, gaudeam, if you should be well, I would be glad.

If the act or event of the protasis is thought of as completed before that of the conclusion BEGINS, the perfect Subjunctive is used.

d. CONTRARY TO FACT (UNREAL): implying that the supposition is untrue.

The Imperfect Subjunctive is used in referring to present time, the Pluperfect Subjunctive in referring to past time. sī valērēs, gaudērem, if you were well (as you are not), I would be glad: sī valuissēs, gāvīsus essem, if you had been well, I would have been glad.

e. GENERAL CONDITIONS: referring (1) to the customary or repeated act of a definite subject with the Indicative in both clauses: sī valēbās, gaudēbam, if you were well (whenever that was the case), I was glad; or (2) to the act of an indefinite subject (you, any one); the condition with the Subjunctive and the conclusion with the Indicative: sī dīcis, irāscit, if you (any one) speak, he becomes angry.

Name the class of conditions of the following examples, selected from the text of the preceding lessons: sī perrumpere possent (LXII); id sī fieret (LXVI). Other examples are found in the text of pēnsa, LXXVI; LXXVIII; LXXIX; LXXXII; chaps. 17; 18; 20; 26; 28. It will be observed that the examples in these pēnsa are found in Indirect discourse and their classification is to be determined after restoring the Direct discourse. The form in which they appear in the text will be understood by noting (1) the changes incident to a change from direct to indirect discourse and (2) the rules for the Sequence of Tenses (explained in the following pēnsum). App. 117; A. 304-311; G. 589-603; H. 507-512; P. 476, 477.

Sequentia litteris Latinis mandātō:

1. If they return home, they obtain supplies. 2. If they (shall) return home, they will obtain supplies. 3. If they were greatly terrified, they asked for peace. 4. If they had been greatly terrified, they would have asked for peace. 5. If I should meet him I would cast myself at his feet. 6. If the battle were fought, we would get possession of the camp. 7.

If he (at any time) saw people, he spoke to them. 8. If you (any one) complain, he shows what he thinks.

SUPPLEMENTARY LESSON II

SEQUENCE OF TENSES (Cōnsecutiō Temporum)

INTRODUCTORY NOTES:

1. The PRIMARY (principal) tenses are those expressing present or future time: the Present, Future and Future Perfect Indicative; the Present and Perfect Subjunctive; the Present and Future Imperative.

a. Occasionally the Perfect Definite (i. e. the Perfect with have), is regarded as a primary tense when present time is clearly in the writer's mind.

b. The Historical Present is sometimes followed by a primary and sometimes by a secondary tense.

2. The SECONDARY (historical) tenses include all forms referring to past time: the Imperfect, Perfect, and Pluperfect Indicative; the Imperfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive; and the Historical Infinitive.

3. In subordinate clauses the use of tenses follows the rule:

Primary tenses are followed by primary tenses (in the subjunctive), secondary tenses are followed by secondary tenses: as—venit ut videat, he comes to see.

veniēbat ut vidēret, he was coming that he might see (or to see).

veniet ut videat, he will come to see.

venī (imperative), ut videās, come, that you may see.

vēnit ut vidēret, he came to see.

viderat quid fēcissēs, he had seen what you had done.

viderat quid fēcēris I shall have seen what you have done.

App. 101-2; A. 285-287; G. 510-518; H. 491-495.

Translate and explain the tense and mode for the following examples from the text of the preceding lessons: cīvitātī persuāsit ut exīrent (XIX); flēbat ut minus latē vagārentur (XXIII); persuādet Casticō ut rēgnum occupāret (XXXIII, XXXV) see on 1 b above; cōnantur ut ē finibus suis exeant (XLVII); persuādent Rauricis utī proficiscantur (LI); lēgātōs mittunt, quī dicerent (LVI); lēgātis respondit, si quid vellent, ad Īd. Apr. reverterentur (LVIII); obsidēs, utī dent, perficit (LXIV); (dixērunt) sē meritōs esse ut oppida expūgnārī nōn dēbuerint (LXIX). Note other examples throughout the text of the lessons.

C. IULII CAESARIS
DE BELLO GALLICO

COMMENTARIUS PRIMUS.

B. C. 58.

1. Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres, quarum unam incolunt Belgae, aliam Aquitani, tertiam qui ipsorum lingua Celtae, nostra Galli appellantur. Hi omnes lingua, institutis, legibus inter se differunt. Gallos ab Description of the divisions and inhabitants of Gaul. Aquitanis Garumna flumen, a Belgis Matrona et Sequana dividit. Horum omnium fortissimi sunt Belgae, propterea quod a cultu atque humanitate provinciae longissime absunt, minimeque ad eos mercatores saepe comeant atque ea, quae ad effeminandos animos pertinent, important, proximique sunt Germanis, qui trans Rhenum incolunt, qui- 5 buscum continenter bellum gerunt. Qua de causa Helvetii quoque reliquos Gallos virtute praecedunt, quod ferè cotidianis proeliis cum Germanis contendunt, cum aut suis finibus eos prohibent, aut ipsi in eorum finibus bellum gerunt. Eorum una pars, quam Gallos obtinere dictum est, initium 15 capit a flumine Rhodano; continetur Garumna flumine, Oceanò, finibus Belgarum; attingit etiam ab Sequanis et Helvetiis flumen Rhenum; vergit ad septentriones. Belgae ab extremis Galliae finibus oriuntur; pertinent ad inferiorem partem fluminis Rheni; spectant in septentrionem et orientem solem. Aquitania a Garumna flumine ad Pyrenaeos montes et eam partem Oceanì, quae est ad Hispaniam, pertinet; spectat inter occasum solis et septentriones.

Orgetorix persuades the Helvetians to invade Gaul.

2. Apud Helvētiōs longē nōbilissimus fuit et dī-tissimus Orgetorix. Is, M. Messālā et M. Pisōne cōnsulibus, rēgnī cupiditate inductus coniūratiōnem nōbilitātis fēcit et cīvitātī persuāsit, ut dē finibus suis cum omni-5 bus cōpiis exirent: pērfacile esse, cum virtūte omnibus praestārent, tōtius Galliae imperiō potiri. Id hōc facilius eis persuāsit, quod undique loci nātūrā Helvētīi continentur:
ūnā ex parte flūmine Rhēnō lātissimō atque altissimō, quī agrum Helvētium ā Germānis dīvidit, alterā ex parte monte 10 Iūrā altissimō, quī est inter Sēquanōs et Helvētiōs, tertiā lacū Lemannō et flūmine Rhodanō, quī prōvinciam nostram ab Helvētiis dīvidit. His rēbus fiēbat, ut et minus latē vagārentur et minus facile finitimis bellum inferre possent; quā ex parte hominēs bellandī cupidī māgnō dolore afficiē-15 bantur. Prō multitudine autem hominum et prō glōriā bellī atque fortitudinis angustōs sē finis habere arbitrābantur, quī in longitudinem milia passuum COXL, in lātitudinem CLXXX patēbant.

pertinērent, comparāre, iumentōrum et carrōrum quam māk-imum numerum coēmere, sēmentēs quam mākimas facere, ut 5 in itinere cōpia frūmenti suppeteret, cum proximis cīvitātibus pācem et amicitiam cōfirmāre. Ad eās rēs cōficiendās biennium sibi satis esse dūxērunt; in tertium annum profectiōnem lēge cōfirmant. Ad eās rēs cōficiendās Orge-torix dēligitur. Is sibi lēgatiōnem ad cīvitātēs suscēpit.
10 In eō itinere persuādet Casticō, Catamantaloēdis filiō, Sēquanō, cūius pater rēgnum in Sēquanīs multōs annōs obtinuerat et ā senātū populī Rō-mānī amicus appellātus erat, ut rēgnum in cīvitāte suā occupāret, quod pater ante habuerat; itemque Dumnorigī Aeduō, frātrī Diviciaci, quī eō tempore principātum in civitate obtinēbat ac m̄ximē plēbī acceptus erat, ut idem cōnārētur, persuādet eīque filiam suam in m̄trimōnium dat. Perfacile factū esse illis probat cōnāta perficere, proptereā quod ipse suae civitatis imperium obtentūrus esset: nōn esse dubium, quin tōtius Galliae plūrimum Helvētiī possent; sē suis cōpiis 20 suoque exercitū illis rēgna conciliātūrum cōfirmat. Hāc orātione adducti inter sē fidem et iūs iūrandum dant et, rēgnō occupātō, per trēs potentissimōs ac firmissimōs populōs tōtius Galliae sēsē potiri posse sp̄rant.

4. Ea rēs est Helvētiis per indicium ēnūntiāta. Orgetorix is tried for conspiracy but escapes. His sudden death.
 Mōribus suis Orgetorigem ex vinclis causam dicere coēgērunt; damnātum poenam sequi oportēbat, ut igni cremārētur. Diē cōstitutā causae dictionis Orgetorix ad iūdicium omnem suam familiam, ad hominum milia decem, 5 undique coēgit et omnēs clientēs obaerātōsque suōs, quōrum m̄gnum numerum habēbat, eōdem condūxit; per eōs, nē causam diceret, sē ēripuit. Cum civitās ob eam rem incitāta armis iūs suum exsequi cōnārētur, multitudinemque hominum ex agris magistrātūs cōgerent, Orgetorix mortuus est; 10 neque abest suspiciō, ut Helvētiī arbitrantur, quin ipse sibi mortem cōsciverit.

5. Post eius mortem nihilō minus Helvētiī id, The Helvetians complete their preparations and depart.
 quod cōstituerant, facere cōnantur, ut ē finibus suis exeant. 7. Caeserī cum id nūntiātum esset, eōs per prōvinciam nostram iter facere cōnārī, mātūrat ab urbe proficiscī et, quam māximīs potest itineribus, in Galliam ūlteriōrem contendit et ad Genāvam pervenit. Prōvinciae 5 tōtī quam māximum potest mīlitum numerum imperat (erat omnīnō in Galliā ūlteriōre legiō ūna), pontem, quī erat ad Genāvam, iubet rescindī. Ubi dē ēius adventū Helvētīi certiorēs factī sunt, lēgātōs ad eum mittunt nōbilissimōs cīvitātis, cūius lēgātiōnis Nammēius et Verucloetius prīnci-palem locum obtinēbant, quī dicerent, sibi esse in animō sine ullō maleficiō iter per prōvinciam facere, proptereā quod aliud iter habērent nullum: rogāre, ut eius voluntāte id sibi facere liceat. Caesar, quod memoriā tenēbat, L. Cassium cōnsulem occisum exercitumque eius ab Helvētīis pulsum et sub iugum mīssum, concēdendum nōn putābat; neque 15 hominēs inimicō animō, datā facultāte per prōvinciam itineris faciundī, temperātūrōs ab iniuriā et maleficiō exīstimābat. Tamen, ut spatium intercēdere posset, dum militēs, quōs imperāverat, convenīrent, lēgātis respondit, diem sē ad dēliberandum sūmptūrum: sī quid vellent, ad Id. Aprīl. re- 20 verterentur.

8. Intereā eā legiōne, quam sēcum habēbat, He prevents their crossing the Rhone. militibusque, quī ex prōvincia convēnerant, ā lacū Lemannō, quī in flūmen Rhodanum influit, ad montem Iūram, quī finēs Sēquanōrum ab Helvētīis dīvidit, mīlia passuum decem novem mūrū in altitudinem pedum sēdecim 5 fossamque perdūcit. Eō opere perfectō, praesidia dispōnit, castella commūnit, quō facilius, sī sē invitō trānsire cōnarentur, prohibēre possit. Ubi ea diēs, quam cōstituerat cum lēgātis, vēnit, et lēgātī ad eum revertērunt, negat sē mōre et exemplō populī Rōmānī posse iter ulli per prō- 10 vinciam dare et, sī vim facere cōentur, prohibitūrum ostendit. Helvētīi eā spē dēiectī, nāvibus iūctīs ratibusque complūribus factīs, aliī vadīs Rhodanī, quā minima altitūdō flūminis erat, nōnnumquam interdiū, saepius noctū, sī perrumpere possent, cōnātī, operis mūnitiōne et militum 15 concursū et tēlis repulsī hōc cōnātū dēstitērunt.

9. Relinquēbātur ūna per Sēquanōs via, quā The Helvetians obtain permission from the Sequani to pass through their country. Sēquanīs invitīs propter angustias ire nōn poterant. Hīs cum suā sponte persuādere nōn possent, lēgātōs ad Dumnorigem Aeduū mittunt, ut, eō dēprecātore, 11. Helvétīi iam per angustias et finēs Sēquanōrum suās cōpiās trādūxerant et in Aeduōrum finēs pervēnerant eōrumque agrōs populābantur.

Aeduī, cum sē suaque ab iīs dēfendere nōn possent, lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittunt rogātum auxilium: Ita sē omnī tempore 5 dē populō Rōmānō meritōs esse, ut paene in cōnspectū exercitūs nostrī agrī vāstārī liberī eōrum in servitūtem abdūcī, oppida expūgnārī nōn dēbuerint. Eōdem tempore Ambarri, necessārii et cōsanguineī Aeduōrum, Caesarem certiorem faciunt, sēsē, dēpopulātīs agrīs, nōn facile ab oppidīs vim 10 hostium prohibēre. Item Allobrogēs, quī trāns Rhodanum vicōs possessiōnēsque habēbant, fugā sē ad Caesarem recipiunt et dēmōstrant, sibi praeter agrī solum nihil esse reliquī. Quibus rēbus adductus Caesar nōn exspectandum sibi statuit, dum omnibus fōrtūnīs sociōrum cōnsūptīs in 15 Santonōs Helvētīi pervenirent.

12. Flūmen est Arar, quod per finēs Aeduō- At the crossing of the Arar Caesar destroys the Tigurini who formed the rear-guard of the Helvetians. rum et Sēquanōrum in Rhodanum influit, incrēdibili lēnitāte, ita ut oculīs, in ūtram partem fluat, iūdicārī nōn possit. Id Helvētīi ratibus ac lintribus iūctīs trānsibant. Ubi per explorātōrēs Caesar certior 5 factus est, trēs iam partēs cōpiārum Helvētīōs id flūmen trādūxisse, quartam ferē partem citrā flūmen Ararim reliquam esse, dē tertiā vigiliā cum legiōnibus tribus ē castrīs profectus ad eam partem pervēnit, quae nōndum flūmen trānsierat. Eōs impeditōs et inopināntēs aggressus māgnam partem 10 eōrum concidit: reliquī sēsē fugae mandārunt atque in proximās silvās abdidērunt. Is pāgus appellābātur Tigurinus: nam omnis civitās Helvētia in quattuor pāgōs divīsa est. Hic pāgus ūnus, cum domō exisset patrum nostrōrum memoriā, L. Cassium cōsulem interfēcerat et eius exercitum 15 sub iugum mīserat. Ita sīve cāsū sīve cōnsiliō deōrum immortalium, quae pars civitātis Helvētiae insīgnem calamitātem populō Rōmānō intulerat, ea princeps poenās persolvit.

14. Hīs Caesar ita respondit: Eō sibi minus dubitātiōnis dari, quod eās rēs, quās lēgātī Helvētīi commemorāssent, memoriā teneret, atque eō gravius ferre, quō minus meritō populī Rōmānī accidissent: quī sī alicūius 5 iniūriae sibi cōsciū fuisset, nōn fuisse difficile cavēre; sed eō dēceptum, quod neque commissum ā sē intellexeret, quārē

 Ita Helvētios ā māioribus suis institūtōs esse, uti obsidēs ac-

 Idem facit Caesar equitātumque omnem ad nu-et Aeduīs atque eōrum sociīs coāctum habēbat, praemittit, quī videant, quas in partēs hostēs iter faciant. Quī cupidius 5

 Quō proeliō sublāti Helvētiī, quod quīngentīs equitibus tan-tam multitudinem equitum prōpulerant, audācius subsistere nōnunquam et novissimō āgmine proeliō nostrōs lacessere 10 coepērunt. Caesar suōs ā proeliō continēbat ac satis habē-

The Aeduans fail to furnish Caesar promised supplies.

16. Interim cotīdiē Caesar Aeduōs frūmentum, quod essent publicē polliciti, flāgitāre. Nam propter frīgora, quod Gallia sub septentriōnibus, ut ante dictum est, posita est, nōn modo frūmenta in agrīs mātūra nōn erant, sed nē pābuli quidem satis māgna cōpia suppetēbat: eō autem frūmentō, quod flūmine Arare nāvibus subvēxerat, proptereā minus uti poterat, quod iter ab Arare Helvētiī āverterant, ā quibus discēdere nōlēbat. Diem ex diē dūcere Aeduī: cōferri, comportāri, adesse dīcere. Ubi sē diūtius dūcī Aedus shows the bad faith of an Aeduan faction headed by Dumnores.

17. Tum dēmum Liscus orātiōne Caesaris adductus, quod antea tacuerat, prōpōnit: Esse nōn nullōs, quōrum auctōritās apud plēbem plūrimum valeat, quī privātīm plūs possint quam ipsī magistrātūs.
 5 Hōs sēditiōsā atque improbā orātiōne multitudinem dētērrere nē frūmentum cōferant, quod dēbeant: praestāre, sī iam prīncipātum Galliae obtinēre nōn possint, Gallōrum quam Rōmānōrum imperia perferre; neque dubitāre quīn, sī Helvētiōs superāverint Rōmānī, unā cum reliquā Galliā Aeduīs
 10 libertātem sint ēreptūrī. Ab eisdem nostra cōnsilia, quaeque in castris gerantur, hostibus ēnūntiārī: hōs ā sē coercēri nōn posse. Quīn etiam, quod necessariam rem coactus Caesarī enūntiārit, intellegere sēsē, quantō id cum periculō fēcerit, et ob eam causam, quam diū potuerit, tacuisse.

18. Caesar hāc orātiōne Liscī Dumnorigem, The influence of Dumnorix. His character and policy. Diviciaci frātre, dēsīgnārī sentiēbat, sed, quod plūribus praesentibus eās rēs iactārī nōlēbat, celeriter concilium dīmittit, Liscum retinet. Quaerit ex sōlō ea, quae in conventū dixerat. Dicit liberius atque audācius. Eadem 5 sēcrētō ab aliis quaerit; reperit esse vēra: Ipsum esse Dumnorigem, summā audaciā, māgnā apud plēbem propter liberalitatem grātiā, cupidum rērum novārum. Complūris annōs portōria reliquaque omnia Aeduōrum vēctīgālia parvō pretiō redēpta habēre, proptereā quod illō licente contrā licērī au- 10 deat nēmō. His rēbus et suam rem familiārem auxisse et facultātēs ad largiendum māgnās comparāsse; māgnū numerum equitātūs suō sūmptū semper alere et circum sē habēre, neque sōlum domī, sed etiam apud finitimās cīvitatēs largiter posse, atque hūius potentiae causā mātrem in Bīturi- 15 gibus hominī illic nōbilissimō ac potentissimō collocāsse, ipsum ex Helvētiīs uxōrum habēre, sorōrem ex mātrem et propinquās suās nūptum in aliās cīvitatēs collocāsse. Favēre et cupere Helvētiīs propter eam affinitatem, ōdisse etiam suō nōmine Caesarem et Rōmānōs, quod eōrum adventū potentia 20 eius dēminūta et Diviciacus frāter in antīquum lōcum grātiaē atque honōris sit restitūtus. Sī quid accidat Rōmānis, summam in spem per Helvētiōs rēgnī obtinendī venīre; imperiō populī Rōmānī nōn modo dē rēgnō, sed etiam dē eā, quam habeat, grātiā dēspērāre. Reperiēbat etiam in quaerendō 25 Caesar, quod proelium equestre adversum paucīs ante diēbus esset factum, initium eius fugae factum ā Dumnorige atque eius equitibus (nam equitātū, quem auxiliō Caesarī Aeduī miserant, Dumnorix praerat): eōrum fugā reliquum esse equitātum perterritum.

20. Diviciacus multīs cum lacrimīs Caesarem complexus obsecrāre coepit, nē quid gravius ex eō plūs quam sē dolōris capere, proptereā quod, cum 5 ipse grātiā plūrimum domī atque in reliquā Galliā, ille minimum propter adolēscēntiam posset, per sē crēvisset; quibus opibus ac nervīs nōn solum ad minuendam grātiā, sed paene ad perniciem suam ūterētur. Sēsē tamen et amōre apud eum tenēret, nēminem exīstimātūrum nōn suā voluntāte factum; quā ex rē futūrum, utī tōtīus Galliae animī ā sē āverterentur. Haec cum plūribus verbīs flēns ā Caesare peteret, Caesar ēius dextram prēndit; cōnsōlātus rogat, finem ōrandī faciat; tantī ēius apud sē grātiā esse ostendit, utī et reī 15 pūblicae iniūriam et suum dolōrem ēius voluntāti āc precibus condōnet. Dumnorigem ad sē vocat, frātrem adhibet; quae in eō reprehendat, ostendit; quae ipse intellegat, quae cīvitās querātur, prōpōnit; monet, ut in reliquum tempus omnēs suspiciōnēs vitet; praeterita sē Diviciacō frātrī condōnāre dicit. 20 Dumnorigī custōdēs pōnit, ut, quae agat, quibuscum loquātur, scīre possit.

ibus nostrīs, Bōiī et Tulingī, quī homīnum milibus circiter xv āgmen hostium claudēbant et novissimis praesidiō erant, 15 ex itinere nostrōs ā latere apertō aggressī circumvenīre et id cōspicātī Helvētīi; quī in montem sēsē recēperant, rūsus īnstāre et proelium redintegrāre coepērunt. Rōmānī con-versa signa bipertītō intulērunt: prima et secunda aciēs, ut victīs āc submōtis resisteret, tertia, ut venientēs sustinēret. 20

26. Ita ancipitī proeliō diū atque ācriter pū-gnātum est. Diūtius cum sustinēre nostrōrum im-petūs nōn possent, alterī sē, ut coeperant, in mon-tem recēpērunt, alterī ad impedimenta et carrōs suōs sē contulērunt. Nam hōc tōtō proeliō, cum ab hōrā septimā ad 5 vesperum pūgnātum sit, āversum hostem vidēre nēmō potuit.

Ad multam noctem etiam ad impedimenta pugnatum est, propterea quod pro vallō carrōs obiēcerant et ē locō superiōre in nostrōs venientēs tēla coniciēbant, et nōnnulli inter carrōs
 10 rotāsque matarās ac trāgulās subiciēbant, nostrōsque vulnerābant. Diū cum esset pugnatum, impedimentis castrisque nostrī potiti sunt. Ibi Orgetorigis filia atque unus ē filiis captus est. Ex eō proeliō circiter milia hominum cxxx superfuērunt eāque tōtā nocte continenter iērunt: nullam 15 partem noctis itinere intermissō in finēs Lingonum diē quartō pervēnērunt, cum et propter vulnera militum et propter sepultūram occisōrum nostrī trīduum morāti eōs sequi nōn potuissent. 27. Helvētiī omnium rērum inopiā adducti lēgātōs dē dēditionē ad eum miserunt. Quī cum eum in itinere convēnissent sēque ad pedēs prōiēcissent suppliciterque locūtī flentēs pācem petissent, atque
 5 eōs in eō locō, quō tum essent, suum adventum expectāre iūssisset, pārūerunt. Eō postquam Caesar pervēnit, obsidēs, arma, servōs, quī ad eōs perfūgissent, poposcit. Dum ea conquiruntur et cōferuntur, nocte intermissā, circiter hominum milia vi eius pāgī, quī Verbigēnus appellātur, sive tim-10 ore perterriti, nē armīs trāditis, suppliciō afficerentur, sive spē salutis inducti, quod in tantā multitudīne dēditiciōrum suam fugam aut occultāri aut omnīnō ignōrāri posse existimārent, primā nocte ē castris Helvētiōrum ēgressi ad Rhēnum finēsque Germānōrum contendērunt.

28. Quod ubi Caesar rescivit, quōrum per finēs ierant, hīs, utī conquīrerent et reducerent, sī sibi pūrgātī esse vellent, imperāvit: reductōs in hostium numerō habuit; reliquōs omnēs, obsidibus, armīs, perfugīs trāditīs, in dēditionem accēpit. Helvētiōs, Tulingōs, Latovicōs in finēs suōs, unde erant profectī, revertī iūssit et, quod omnibus frūgibus āmissis, domī nihil erat, quō famem tolerārent, Allobrogibus imperāvit, ut iis frūmentī cōpiam facerent; ipsōs oppida vicōsque, quōs incenderant, restituere iūssit. Id eā māximē ratiōne fēcit, quod nōluit eum locum, unde Helvētiī discesserant, vacāre, nē propter bonitātem agrōrum Germānī, quī trāns Rhēnum incolunt, ē suis finibus in Helvētiōrum finēs trānsirent et finitimī Galliae prōvinciae Allobrogibusque essent. Bōiōs petentibus Aeduīs, quod ēgregiā virtūte erant cōgnitī, ut in finibus suis collocārent, concessit; quibus illī agrōs dedērunt quōsque postea in parem iūris libertātisque condiciōnem, atque ipsī erant, recēpērunt.

29. In castrīs Helvētiōrum tabulae repertae sunt litterīs Graecīs cōfectae et ad Caesarem relātae, quibus in tabulis nōminatim ratiō cōfecta erat, quī numerus domō exisset eōrum, quī arma ferre possent, et item sēparātim puerī, senēs, mulierēsque. Quārum omnium rērum summa erat capitum Helvētiōrum milia CCLXIII, Tulingōrum milia XXXVI, Latovicōrum XIV, Rauricōrum XXIII, Bōiōrum XXXII; ex hīs, quī arma ferre possent, ad milia nōnāgintā duo. Summa omnium fuērunt ad milia CCLXVIII. Eōrum, quī domum rediērunt, cēnsū habitō, ut Caesar imperāverat, repertus est numerus milium 0 et x.

GRAMMATICAL APPENDIX AND INDEX

The various forms of inflection and the important principles of Grammatical construction which have been given in connection with the successive lessons are here presented in a connected manner. References are given to the lessons (by Roman numerals) and Notes (by Arabic numerals) where the principles are first explained and illustrated

Ab.	plūre	plūribus	plūribus

12. Superlatives: Formation and Inflection, XVIII, 2.

13. In the following adjectives the three forms of comparison are derived from different stems:—

- bonus, melior, optimus, good, better, best. malus, peior, pessimus, bad, worse, worst.
magnus, maior, maximus, great, greater, greatest.
parvus, minor, minimus, small, less, least.
multus, plūs (n.), plurimus, much, more, most.
nēquam (indecl.), nēquior, nēquissimus, worthless.
frūgī (indecl.), frūgālior, frūgālissimus, useful, worthy.
dexter, dexterior, dextimus, on the right, dexterous.

14. The following Comparatives and Superlatives appear without a Positive because formed from stems not used as adjectives:—

- cis, citrā (adv. on this side): citerior, citimus, hither, hithermost.
prae, prō (prep. before): prior, primus, former, first.
prope (adv. near): propior, proximus, nearer, next.
ultrā (adv. beyond): ulterior, ultimus, farther, farthest.

15. Of the following the positive forms are rare, except when used as nouns (generally in the plural):—

exterus, exterior, extrēmus (extimus), outer, outmost.

inferus, inferior, infimus (imus), lower, lowest.

posterus, posterior, postrēmus (postumus), latter, last.

The plurals, exteri, foreigners; posterī, posterity; superī, the heavenly gods; inferī, those below, are common.

16. The following in -lis add -limus to the stem with the stem vowel dropped: facilis, difficilis, similis, dissimilis, gracilis, humilis; comparative regular: as, facilis, easy; facilior, facillimus.

17. Adjectives in -er form the superlative by adding -rimus to the nominative; the comparative is regular: as ācer, keen; ācrior, ācerrimus.

18. Adjectives:—agreement with nouns of different gender, chap. 27, 7, 8. Distributives, LI, 2. Denoting order and succession, chap. 22, 1. Adjectives used as adverbs, LXXIV, 3.

19. Adverbs. In Latin, as in English, adverbs modify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs. For their formation from adjectives of the Second Declension see XVIII, 1. For formation of the comparative see XXI, 2. Position, Intr. Lesson, IX, g.

20. Numeral adverbs are formed from numbers above four by the ending -iēs. See illustrations in table (23, a).

21. Many adverbs were originally oblique cases of nouns, adjectives, or pronouns, e. g. multō, much; tantum, only; quō, whither; contrā, on the other hand; rēctā, straightway; partim, partly.

22. Adverbs are classified as adverbs of manner, e. g. audācter, boldly; of quantity, e. g. multum; of place, e. g. eō, there; of time, e. g. nunc, now; of cause, e. g. eō, for this reason; interrogative, e. g. cūr, why? nōne? negative, e. g. nōn, numquam.

NUMERALS

a. The Cardinals from quattuor to centum, inclusive, are indeclinable.

b. The hundreds are declined like the plural of māgnus.

c. Mille, as an adjective, is indeclinable. As a substantive, mille is used in the Neut. Sing., Nom. and Acc. The plural is inflected like the plural of mare (Chart I): milia, milium, etc.

d. The inflection of ūnus is given in XX, Intr. n. 2; of duo in LI, Intr. n. 2; of trēs, in XLIX, Intr. n. 1. ambō, both, is inflected like duo.

e. The NUMERAL ADJECTIVES and ADVERBS are:—

PRONOUNS

24. Personal. The inflection of the first personal pronoun (ego) and of the second personal pronoun (tū) is given in LXXXII, Intr. n. 2 and in Chart III.

Rem. A personal pronoun of the third person is wanting in Latin. A demonstrative (most frequently is) is sometimes used in the nominative and regularly in the oblique cases. The forms of the reflexive suī are used in indirect discourse.

25. Reflexive. For the inflection of the reflexive suī see XXXII, Intr. n. 1 and Chart III; for its use see XXXII, 1.

Rem. In the first and second persons the oblique cases of the Personal pronouns are used as reflexives, e. g. mē amō, I love myself.

26. Possessive. The possessive pronouns, meus , my,	noster , our,

tuus , thy, your,	vester , your,
suus , his, her, its,	suus , their are declined as adjectives of the first and second declensions: meus, mea, meum; noster, nostra, nostrum; but meus has in the vocative singular masculine generally mī, sometimes meus.

Rem. As suus is reflexive, referring to the subject (see XXXII, 1) the genitive of a demonstrative pronoun must be used for a possessive, not referring to the subject: e. g. umbram suam vidit, he saw his (own) shadow but umbram eius vidit, he saw his (somebody's else) shadow.

27. Demonstrative.

a. For definition and use see XVIII, Intr. n. 1.

b. is. For inflection and use see XVIII, Intr. n. 2.

c. hic. For inflection see XXI, Intr. n. 2; for the use, XXI, Intr. n. 1.

d. idem. For formation and inflection see XXXVII, Intr. n. 2.

e. ille. For inflection see XXXVIII, Intr. n. 2.

Rem. Ille refers to that which is remote or well known.

f. iste is inflected like ille.

Rem. Iste is intermediate, in remoteness, between hic and ille. It is used of an opponent and sometimes in contempt.

The demonstratives are also inflected in Chart III.

28. Intensive. The intensive, ipse, is inflected in XXXVIII, Intr. n. 2 and in Chart III.

29. Relative. For inflection see XXII, Intr. n. 1 and Chart III. For translation by demonstrative and conjunction see LXXVIII, 4.

30. Interrogative and Indefinite. The inflection, with statement of the adjective forms, is given in XLIX, Intr. n. 2. See also Chart III.

31. Indefinite Compounds. The indefinite Compounds siquis, sī- quī (sī quis, sī quī), if any one, if any; nēquis, nēquī (nē quis, nē quī), lest any one, lest any; num quis, num quī, whether any one, whether any; aliquis (alius + quis), some one or other, some one, some, are declined like quis but (except in the Nominative plural feminine) generally have qua instead of quae.

The Indefinite Compounds quīdam, a, a certain, a certain one; quispiam, any one, any; quisquam, any one at all; quīvis (quī + vis, from volō), any one you wish, any one, any; quilibet (quī + libet, it pleases), any one you please, any one, any, are inflected like the simple forms of quis and quī.

32. Indefinite Relative. a. The indefinite Relative quisquis, whoever, is a doubling of the Interrogative pronoun. The following forms belong to classic usage:

	Masc.	Fem. Singular.	Neut.
NOM.	quisquis (quīquī)		quidquid (quicquid)
ACC.	quemquem		quidquid (quicquid)
ABL.	quōquō	quāquā Elural.	quōquō
NOM.	quīquī
D., Abl.	quibusquibus

b. The Indefinite Relative quīcumque (quī + -cumque, ever), whoever, is declined like quī.

33. Universal. For the universal, quisque, see XLIX, Intr. n. 2 and Chart III,

34. Correlatives. A table of pronouns, pronominal adjectives, and adverbs, exhibiting the forms when demonstrative, relative, interrogative, indefinite relative, and indefinite, is given in Chart III.

A complete exhibit of the forms of the regular verb is also made in Charts IV-VI.

36. Deponent Verbs. For Definition see XXVII, 2. For Inflection see the forms of the regular verb in the passive voice.

37. Active Periphrastic. For formation and use see XXXVIII, 1.

38. Passive Periphrastic. For formation and use see LVIII, 5.

39. The Verb sum. Tenses in the Indicative from the Present stem, XXXIV, Intr. n. 1-3. Tenses in the Subjunctive from the Present stem, XLI, Intr. n. 1, 2. Tenses from the Perfect stem, LXXVIII. The remaining forms of sum are:

IMPERATIVE

PRESENT

2. es, be thou.

este, be ye.

FUTURE

2. estō, thou shalt be.

estōte, ye shall be.

3. estō, he shall be.

suntō, they shall be.

INFINITIVE

PRES. esse, to be.

PERF. fuisse, to have been.

FUT. fore or futūrus esse, to be about to be.

FUT. PART. futūrus, -a, -um, about to be.

The verb sum is defective as well as irregular, having no gerund or supine, and no participle but the future.

40. Compounds of Sum. Sum is compounded without any change of inflection with the prepositions ab, ad, dē, in, inter, ob, prae, prō, sub, super.

In the compound prōsum, prō is followed by d before e. Thus prōsum, prōdes, prōdest, prōsumus, prōdestis, prōsunt, etc. The preposition had the form prōd originally.

The full inflection of possum (I am able, I can) is here given. Possum = potsum (potis, able, +sum). Before s the t of the adj. is assimilated. It is retained before e.

PRIN. PARTS: possum, posse (for pot-esse), potuī (for pot-fui).

INDIC.		SUBJ.	INDIC.	SUBJ.

41. Ferō. For inflection see LXXIV.

42. Verbs in -iō (capiō, faciō, fiō). For inflection see LXV.

43. eō. For inflection see LXIV.

44. volō and nōlō. For inflection see LXXX, Intr. n.

45. DEFECTIVE VERBS

a. The verbs coepī (I began), ōdī (I hate), and meminī (I remember) have lost their Present stem and are called defective. The following is a synopsis of the tenses formed from the Perfect stem:—

coep-	} ī, -eram, -erō, erim, -issem, -isse.
ōd- memin-

coepī has a fut. part. coeptūrus and a perf. part. coeptus.

meminī has the impv. mementō, -tōte, and the pres. part. meminēns

b. In ōdī and meminī the perf., plup., and fut. perf. have the meaning of the pres., imperf., and fut.; that is, they are preteritive verbs.

Nōvī, I know, and cōnsuēvī (cōnsuēscō), I am wont, are also preteritive verbs.

IMPERSONAL VERBS

46. Impersonal verbs have no personal subject. They appear only, in the third person of the indicative and subjunctive, and in the infinitive and gerund. They are:—

a. Verbs expressing the operations of nature and the time of day; as pluit, it rains; ningit, it snows; vesperāscit, it grows late.

b. Verbs of feeling, where the subject of the feeling becomes the object as affected by it; as, miseret, it grieves; pudet, it shames.

c. Verbs which have a phrase or clause as their subject; as, accidit, it happens; libet, it pleases; restat, it remains, etc.

SYNOPSIS OF IMPERSONAL VERBS

1. it is plain	2. it is allowed.	3. it chances.	4. it results.
cōnstat	licet	accidit	ēvenit
cōnstābat	licēbat	accidēbat	ēveniēbat
cōnstābit	licēbit	accidet	ēveniet
cōnstitit	licuit	accidit	ēvōnit
cōnstitērat	licuerat	acciderat	ēvōnerat
cōnstitērit	licuerit	acciderit	ēvōnerit
cōnstet	liceat	accidat	ēveniat
cōnstāret	licēret	accideret	ēveniret
cōnstitērit	licuerit	acciderit	ēvōnerit
cōnstitisset	licuisset	accidisset	ēvōnisset
cōnstāre	licēre	accidere	ēvenire
cōnstitisse	licuisse	accidisse	ēvenisse
-stātūrum esse	licitūrum esse	—	ēventūrum esse

GENDER

47. I. General rules.

a. The names of male beings, rivers, winds, and mountains are masculine.

b. The names of female beings, countries, towns, islands, plants, trees and of most abstract qualities are feminine.

c. Indeclinable names, infinitives, phrases, clauses used as nouns, and any terms used as indeclinable nouns are neuter.

II. Special rules for the declensions.

For gender of nouns of First declension see VII, 1; of Second declension, VIII, 1; of Third declension, XIII, 1 a-c and III below; of Fourth declension, XXVII, 4; of Fifth declension, XXIII, 1.

III. The Gender of third declension nouns may be determined by the endings of the Nominative singular, as follows—

a. Masculine endings (of the Nom. Sing.) are ō, -or, -ōs, -er, -es (gen. -idis, -itis).

b. Feminine endings are: -ās (gen. -ātis), -ēs, -is, -ys, -x, -s (following a consonant), -dō, -gō (gen. -inis), -iō, -ūs (gen. -ūdis, -ūtis)

c. Neuter endings are: -a, -e, -ī, -y, -c, -l, -t, -men, -ar, -ur, -us (gen. -eris, -oris).

CASES

The principal constructions, as explained and illustrated in the successive lessons of this book, are here presented in a connected form.

48. The names of the cases, with a statement of the general use of each case, are given in the introductory notes of V.

Nominative

49. Subject Nominative. The subject of a finite verb is put in the Nominative case; e. g. Belgae unam partem incolunt V, Intr. n. a.

50. Predicate Nominative. A noun in the predicate denoting the same person or thing as the subject is put in the Nominative; e. g. Is pāgus appellābātur Tigūrīnus LXIII, 2.

51. Nominative in Apposition. A noun in apposition with the subject is put in the Nominative; e. g. Flūmen est Arar.

Genitive

52. General Rule. Any noun defining or limiting another noun and denoting a different person or thing, is in the Genitive.

53. Subjective Genitive. The Subjective Genitive denotes the Subject or agent of any action or feeling, or indicates that to which a thing belongs; e. g. cultū prōvinciae, Orgetorīgis cupiditās, Dei amor, the love of God, i. e. the love felt by Him. Dei amor, love for God, illustrates the Objective Genitive.

Rem. This construction includes the Possessive Genitive (57) and the Genitive of Quality (58).

54. Objective Genitive. The Objective Genitive designates the object toward which the action or feeling is directed; e. g. rēgnī cupiditāte, by a desire for royal power; causae dictionis, of the pleading of the case.

This construction is used with Nouns, Adjectives, and Verbs.

55. The Genitive with Adjectives. The Objective Genitive is used with adjectives denoting desire, knowledge, skill, memory, sharing, guilt, fulness, mastery, and their opposites; also with verbals in -āx and present participles used as adjectives; e. g. cupidus rērum novārum, desirous of a revolution; glōriae memor, mindful of glory; rationis particeps, endowed with reason; militāris rei peritus, skilled in military science; tenāx prōpositi, steadfast in purpose.

56. Partitive Genitive. See LXXI, 2. With any word denoting a part, substantives, comparatives, numerals, superlatives, etc., the Genitive may be used in indicating the whole of which the part is taken; e. g. quārum ūnam, II; eam partem Ōceanī, XVI; nōbilissimōs civitātis, LXVI; tantum spatii, so much (of) space; māior frātrum, the elder of the brothers.

57. Possessive Genitive. See Rem. under 53. The Genitive is used to indicate the author or possessor, LVI, 4; e. g. in eōrum finibus, XI; finēs Sēquanōrum, LXIX; auctōritāte Orgetorigis permōti, XXIX; extrēmum oppidum Allobrogum, XLIII. This construction includes—

- a. The Appositional Genitive; e. g. urbs Rōmæ, the city of Rome, and
- b. The Predicate Genitive; e. g. domus est Caesaris, the house is Caesar's; prudentia est senectutis, discretion belongs to (is of) old age.

58. Genitive of Description or Quality. A limiting noun used to denote quality may be put in the Genitive when modified by an adjective; e. g. vir summæ virtutis, a man of the highest courage. (Cf. abl. of quality.) This construction includes—

- a. The Genitive of Measure. XLIX, 1, and
- b. The Genitive of Indefinite Value, Chap. 20, 14, 15.

59. Genitive with Verbs. Verbs meaning to forget, remember, pity, concern, commonly take the (Objective) Genitive; e. g. reminisceretur et veteris incommodi populi Rōmāni et pristinae virtutis Helveticōrum, LXXVI, let him remember, etc.; verbi oblitus sum, I have forgotten the word.

a. Some verbs govern the Accusative and Genitive; e. g. arguit me furti, he accuses me of theft; egestatis eum admonēbat, he reminded him of his poverty.

b. recordor, I recollect, governs the Accusative when referring to a single act.

c. For the Genitive with potior, see XL, 4.

d. For the Genitive with postridiē, see Chap. 23, 1; with satis, see Chap. 19, 6.

Dative

60. The Dative of Indirect Object. The Dative of the Indirect Object shows to or for whom or what anything is or is done. This construction may be used with any Intransitive verb whose meaning allows or with Transitive verbs in connection with the Accusative; e. g. Caesari renūntiatur, LXVI, 1; sēsē fugae mandarunt, LXXIII.

61. Dative with Special Verbs. The Dative of Indirect Object is used with many verbs which in English are followed by a direct object; e. g. verbs meaning to benefit, injure, command, obey, serve, resist, please, displease, persuade, pardon, and in general any verb whose action affects indirectly the interests of its object; e. g. et civitatī persuāsit, XX; ut sibi liceat, LVI; huic legiōni Caesar cōfidēbat, Caesar trusted in this legion; tibi parcam, I will spare you.

Rem. Verbs which take a Dative can be used in the passive only impersonally and the Dative is retained.

62. The Dative with Verbs Compounded with Prepositions. The Dative of Indirect Object is used with verbs compounded with the prepositions, ad, ante, con, in, inter, ob, post, prae, prō, sub, super, and sometimes with ab, circum, dē, and ex; e. g. cum virtūte omnibus praestārent, XX; et minus facile finitimis bellum inferre posset, XXIII; hōc Caesari dēfuit, this failed Caesar; ei munitiōni . . . T. Labiēnum lēgātum praefecit, LXVII; Aeduīs libertātem sint ereptūrī, they would take away liberty from the Aeduans.

Rem. The adverbs satis, bene, and male also take the Dative in composition; e. g. sī Allobrogibus satisfaciāt, LXXXII.

63. Dative with Adjectives. The Dative is used with many adjectives to denote the object to which the quality is directed; e. g. plēbī acceptus, XXXVII, 2; proximīque Germānis, VII; classi ūtile, useful for the class.

64. Dative with Nouns and Adverbs. The Dative follows some nouns and adverbs formed from verbs and adjectives which take the Dative; e. g. lēgibus obtemperatiō, obedience to the laws; proximē castris, very near the camp.

65. Dative of Agent. The Dative of Agent is used with the Gerundive and the compound tenses of passive verbs to show the person on whom the necessity rests; e. g. Caesar non expectandum sibi statuit, Caesar determined that he ought non to wait (lit. that it ought not to be waited by himself, LXXI, 3; omnia Caesari agenda erant, all things had to be done by Caesar.

66. Dative of Possession. The verb esse and its compounds (except abesse and posse) are used to denote (the fact of) Possession; e. g. sibi nihil esse, that they have nothing, LXXI, 1; est mihi liber, I have a book; deest mihi pecūnia, I lack money.

76. Dative of Purpose or End. The Dative is used to denote the Purpose or End; e. g. māgnō erat impedimentō, it was (for) a great hindrance, Chap. 25; funditorēs subsidiō mittit, he sends slingers for the as- sistance. This dative is often accompanied by another dative (of Reference, Possession) showing the person or thing affected, as Gallis magnō erat impedimentō, it was (for) a great hindrance to the Gauls; subsidiō opidānis, for the assistance of (as an aid to) the townsmen.

68. Dative of Reference. The Dative of Reference (of Advantage or Disadvantage) designates the person for whose advantage or disadvantage something is; e. g. sibi purgātī, blameless in his sight, Chap. 28 2, 3; vitae discimus, we learn for life.

69. Ethical Dative. The Ethical Dative (a special use of the Dative of Reference) is used with the personal pronoun (or reflexive) to denote the person especially interested, when the sense requires no such pronoun; e. g. quid tibi vīs, what do you wish (for yourself)?

Accusative

70. Accusative of the Direct Object. The Accusative of the Direct Object is used with transitive verbs to denote that which is directly affected, or is caused or produced by the action of the verb; e. g. Helvētīi reliquōs Gallōs virtūte praecēdunt; is sibi legātīonem ad civitātēs suscēpit.

71. Direct Object with Special Verbs.

a. Many verbs expressing feeling (intransitive in English) govern the Accusative; e. g. mē ridet, he laughs at me; meum casum dolent, they grieve at my calamity.

b. Verbs of taste, smell, etc. take an Accusative of the quality; e. g. vīnum redolēns, smelling of wine.

.. The impersonal verbs deceat, dēlectat, fallit, fugit, iuvat, oportet, praeterit govern the Accusative; e. g. mē oportet, I ought (it behooves me).

72. Cognate Accusative. Some verbs, otherwise intransitive, take an Accusative with a meaning kindred to their own; e. g. vītam vivere, to live a life.

73. Direct Object with Predicate Accusative. Verbs meaning make, call, choose, name, esteem, show, and the like may take a Predicate Accusative in connection with the direct object; e. g. Hamilcarem imperātorem fēcērunt, they made Hamilcar commander.

74. Direct Object with Secondary Accusative.

a. Verbs of asking, demanding, teaching, and celāre, to hide or conceal, take an accusative of the person with another of the thing; e. g. mē sententiam rogāvit, he asked me my opinion.

b. Verbs compounded with ad, trāns, or circum sometimes take two accusatives, one depending upon the verb, the other upon the preposition LXXII. 2.

75. Accusative of Specification. The Accusative of Specification (also called Greek or Adverbial Accusative) shows the part affected or the limit of the action, or that in reference to which the act takes place; e. g. eam partem nōs locus admonuit, in reference to this thing the place has warned us; capita velāmur, we have our heads veiled (we are veiled in respect to our heads). Here may be classed such adverbial phrases as: māximam partem, for the most part; quod sī, but (as to which) if; quid dicam? why should I speak?

76. Terminal Accusative (of Place or Limit). The place (or person) to which is generally designated by the Accusative with the prepositions ad or in, but names of towns or small islands and the nouns domus and rūs omit the preposition, LXVIII; e. g. minimēque ad eōs mercatōrēs s̄aepe commeant; ipse in Ītaliā magnīs itineribus contendit; domum reditiōnis sp̄e sublātā, XLVIII; Rōmam eō, I am going to Rome.

77. Accusative of Extent of Space. The Accusative is used to denote the extent of space; e. g. mīlia passuum decem novem mūrūm . . . perdūcit, LX; qui in longitudinē mīlia passuum cccxl, in lātitudinē cclxxx patēbant, XXVII; nix quattuor pedēs alta, snow four feet deep.

Rem. Occasionally the genitive of quality is used instead of this construction. Compare also the ablative denoting measure of difference.

78. Accusative of Duration of Time (Temporal Accusative). The Accusative is used to denote time how long; e. g. cūius pater rēgnum in Sēquanīs multōs annōs obtinuerat, XXXIII, 5; septem hōrās pūgnāvērunt; comptūrēs annōs, Chap. 18.

79. The Accusative in Exclamations. The Accusative is used in exclamations; e. g. mē miserum, wretched me!

80. Accusative, Subject of Infinitive. The Subject of the Infinitive is in the Accusative, XX, 2; LXX.

81. Accusative with Prepositions. The Accusative is used with the prepositions ad , to	ergā , towards	post , after adversus , against	extrā , outside	praeter , beyond adversum , towards	infrā , below	prope , near ante , before	inter , among	propter , on account of apud , at, near	intrā , inside	secundum , next to circā , or	iuxtā , near	suprā , above circum , around	ob , on account of	trāns , across circiter , about	penes , in the power	ultrā , on the further side cis , citrā, this side	per , through	versus , towards contrā , against	pōne , behind

Vocative

The Vocative is the case of direct address, but the Nominative is often used instead; e. g. serve, audī, slave, listen; audī tū, populus Albānus, hear thou, people of Alba.

Ablative

83. Ablative of Separation. The Ablative of Separation denotes that from which anything is separated, or of which it is deprived and is used

a. With words meaning to deprive, remove, be absent, need, and the like; e. g. Gallōs ab Aquitānis Garumna flūmen dividit; suis finibus eōs prohibent; ut dē finibus suis . . . exirent; hōc cōnātū dēstitērunt: aberrās ā prōpōsitō, you are wandering from the point. See LV, 1.

b. With verbs compounded with ā, ab, dē, ex: e. g. ut ē finibus suis exeant, to leave their country, XLVII; hōc cōnātū dēstitērunt, LXII.

c. With adjectives meaning free from, without, etc. e. g. animus liber cūrā, a mind free from care.

d. With opus and ūsus meaning need; e. g. auctoritāte tuā nōbis opus est, we need your authority.

e. With the prepositions ā (ab), dē, ē (ex), sine.

Rem. The preposition is more freely used when the separation is literal than when it is figurative. See the examples under b above.

84. Ablative of Source and Material. Source or Origin, and the Material of which anything consists is expressed by the Ablative. Sometimes a preposition, dē, ē (ex) is employed; e. g. Iove nātus, son of Jove, descended from Jove; pocula ex aurō, cups of gold; quī ex prōvinciā convēnerant, LX, 2. For the Ablative of Source instead of the Partitive Genitive see Chap. 26, 12.

Rem. Material may also be expressed by the Genitive of Material, as: lactis flūmina, rivers of milk.

85. Ablative of Cause.

a. The Ablative, generally without a preposition, is used with verbs and adjectives to denote the cause or reason: e. g. repentīnō ēius adventū commōtī, LXXV; suā victōriā glōriārentur, they boasted (because) of their own victory, LXXX; hūius potentiae causā, for the sake of this power, Chap. 18.

b. The Ablative of Cause is sometimes employed with the prepositions ā (ab), dē, ē (ex), in, prae; e. g. quā dē causā, IX; quā ex parte, XXV; nōn prae lacrimis scribere, not to write in consequence (or because) of tears.

86. Ablative of Agent. The Ablative with ā or ab is used with persons (or personified objects) to denote the AGENT or DOER, XXXV, 1. Cf. also Divicō respondit: ita Helvētios ā māioribus suis institūtōs esse, thus the Helvetians had been trained by their ancestors, LXXXII; ab eisdem, by the same (persons), Chap. 17.

Rem. Contrast the Dative of Agent (65) which does not denote the voluntary agent but the person on whom the necessity rests.

87. Ablative of Comparison. The comparative degree is followed by the Ablative unless quam is used. With quam the objects compared are in the same case, Chap. 15, 15. Cf. also nōn longius mille et quingentis passibus, Chap. 22; quid est melius bonitāte? what is better than goodness? callidior es quam hic, you are shrewder than he.

88. Ablative of Manner. The Ablative, commonly with cum or an adjective, or both (but frequently without a preposition), is employed to denote the manner of an action, LXVII, 2. Cf. also cum virtute vixit (Cic.), he lived virtuously; gladius dēstrictis, with drawn swords, Chap. 25; magnō dolore afficiēbantur, XXV; quantō cum periculō id fecerit, with how great risk he did this, Chap. 17; avis mōre, like a bird, in the manner of a bird.

NOTE. Here belongs the Ablative in such expressions as, in accordance with; e. g. mōre populī Rōmānī, in accordance with the custom of the Roman people. This construction is, however, variously classified: see XLIV, 1.

89. Ablative of Accompaniment. Accompaniment is regularly denoted by the Ablative with the preposition cum. The preposition is often omitted in military expressions; e. g. cum Germānis contendunt; subsequēbātur omnibus cōpiis, he followed close with all his troops.

90. Ablative of Means or Instrument. The instrument and means of an action are expressed by the Ablative, without a preposition. See XL, 1 with examples there cited.

91. Ablative with Deponents. The Ablative is used with the deponent verbs ūtor, fruor, fungor, potior, vescor, and several of their compounds; also with nitor and innitor. See XX, 3; L, 5; LXXVII, 1.

Rem. With ūtor, fruor, vescor, this is an Ablative of Means; with nitor, innitor, a Locative Ablative.

92. Ablative of Degree of Difference. The Ablative is employed after Comparatives and words implying comparison to express the Degree of Difference, LXXVIII, 3. Cf. also biduō mē antecessit (Cic.), he preceded me by two days; mille passibus longius, a mile farther (farther by a mile).

93. Ablative of Quality or Description. The Ablative, with an adjective or limiting Genitive, is used to denote quality, LV, 4. Cf. also Dumnorix summā audāciā, Dumnorix, (a man) of the greatest boldness, Chap. 18; hominēs inimicō animō, men of hostile spirit.

94. Ablative of Price. The Price of an object (definite value) is regularly denoted by the Ablative; Chap. 18, 9. vendidit aurō patriam, he sold his country for gold; māgnō vendidit, he sold at a high price; parvō pretiō, at a low price.

For the Genitive of indefinite value see Chap. 20, 14, 15.

95. Ablative of Specification. The Ablative (without a preposition) is used to show in what respect a statement is true. See XLVII, 2 and the examples there cited.

Rem. The supine in ū belongs to this construction. See on XXXVIII, 2.

96. Ablative of Place (Locative Ablative).

a. The place in which (where) is regularly denoted by in with the Ablative, Chap. 24, 5. Cf. est in prōvinciā, LXVI; quae in conventū dixerat, Chap. 18.

b. The preposition (in) is omitted with certain designations of place: See LII, 1.

c. Names of towns, small islands, and a few common nouns, denote the place where by the Locative (100).

97. Ablative of Time.

a. The Ablative (without a preposition) is employed to designate time when or within which, XXXVII, 1.

b. The Ablative with in is sometimes used to express a definite time (or circumstance) and with dē to express action begun during the given time, as: — dē mediā nocte, in (i. e. begun in) the middle of the night.

c. For the Ablative expressing both Time and Cause see Chap. 18, 23. For Duration of Time see 78 above.

98. Ablative Absolute. A noun (or pronoun) and participle, used parenthetically in explanation, are regularly put in the Ablative. A noun or an adjective may take the place of the participle. For examples and translations of the Ablative Absolute see XIX, 2; XL, 3; L, 6; LXI, 2; LXIII, 4; Chap. 22, 5.

99. Ablative with Prepositions. The following prepositions govern the Ablative:—

ā, ab, abs, away from, by	ē, ex, out of absque, without, but for	prae, in comparison with cōram, in presence of	prō, in front of, for cum, with	sine, without dē, from	tenus, up to, as far as

The following govern the Ablative when denoting rest in a place, but the Accusative if denoting motion to a place.

in, into, in sub, under subter, beneath super, above

In general these prepositions are to be construed as denoting relations of time, cause, place, etc.

Locative

100. The Locative case occurs only with the names of towns and small islands, and with a few common nouns as domus, rūs, humus.

The Locative has the same form as the Genitive in the singular of the first and second declensions; e. g. Rōmae, at Rome; domī, at home. In third declension nouns and in the plural of all declensions the Locative has the same form as the Dative or Ablative; e. g. rūrī, in the country; Karthagine, at Carthage; Athēnis, at Athens.

SEQUENCE OF TENSES

101. The tenses of the verb are distinguished as:

a. Primary or Principal Tenses: i. e. those denoting present or future time, the Present, Perfect with have, Future, and Future Perfect.

b. Secondary or Historical Tenses: i. e. those denoting past time, the Imperfect, Perfect, Pluperfect, and Historical Infinitive.

102. In subordinate clauses, the use of tenses follows the rule:

Primary tenses follow Primary tenses and Secondary tenses follow Secondary tenses. For a further statement with illustrative examples see supplementary lesson II.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE

THE SUBJUNCTIVE IN INDEPENDENT SENTENCES

103. Hortatory Subjunctive

The Subjunctive is used in commands and exhortations; e. g. obsidēs dentur, let hostages be given; eāmus, let us go.

Negative commands (prohibitions) addressed to a particular person or persons are regularly expressed, in classic Latin prose, in one of three ways:

- a. by nē with the Perfect Subjunctive; e. g. nē id fēceris, don't do this.
- b. by nōlī, or nōlīte, with Complementary Infinitive; e. g. nōlī id facere.
- c. by cave, or cavēte, with the Present Subjunctive; e. g. cave (nē) id faciās.

But nē is followed by the Present Subjunctive if the prohibition is general.

104. Optative Subjunctive

The Subjunctive is used to express a wish or desire, sometimes without a conjunction, sometimes with utinam, ut, ō sī,—the present for desires relating to future time, the imperfect for desires unfulfilled in present time, the pluperfect for desires unfulfilled in past time; e. g. utinam meī civēs beātī sint, may my fellow-citizens be prosperous! ō sī Caesar adesset! would that Caesar were here! ō sī Caesar adfuisset! would that Caesar had been here!

105. Dubitative or Rhetorical Subjunctive

The Subjunctive is used in questions, not as to what is, but as to what might be, or should be. Such questions either imply doubt (dubitative), as quid agam? what can I do? or are asked for effect (rhetorical), being in reality strong statements; e. g. hōc faciam? Minimē. Can I do this? By no means.

106. Potential Subjunctive

The Potential Subjunctive is used to express in an unemphatic way the ideas expressed by the auxiliaries of the English Potential (may, can, might, could, would); e. g. dīcam, I should say; forsitan quaerātis, perhaps you may inquire; quid facerem, what could I do?

Rem. 1. The Potential Subjunctive is also explained as the apodosis (conclusion) of a conditional sentence in which the protasis is omitted but may be supplied from the context. Thus in the first example, by supplying the protasis, we have (sī quid dīcam) dīcam, If I should say anything, I should say—.

Rem. 2. The Dubitative and Potential Subjunctive are also used in dependent clauses, especially in indirect questions.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE IN DEPENDENT CLAUSES

107. Final (Purpose) Clauses.

a. Pure clauses of Purpose are introduced by ut (utī); negative clauses by nē, rarely by ut nē. XLVIII, 6; XLV, 4.

b. Relative clauses of Purpose are introduced by the relative pronoun (quī) or the relative adverbs (ubi, unde, etc.), the antecedent being expressed or implied in the main clause. LXVI, 2.

Rem. The Pure (ut) clause of purpose indicates the purpose of the action expressed by the main verb while the Relative clause connects the purpose with some special word (antecedent expressed or implied) in the main clause. The relative is equivalent to ut with a demonstrative, as, mīsit explorātōrēs quī (ut ii) vidērent, etc.

c. Quō (= ut eō) rather than ut introduces a purpose clause, whenever that clause contains an adjective or adverb in the comparative degree. See LXI, 1. Cf. mōntem ascendit quō (ut eō) facilius vidēret, he went up the mountain to see (that he might see) more easily.

d. Substantive clauses of Purpose are Pure clauses (see above) which have the construction of Substantives, i. e. are used as subject, or as object, or in apposition. See L, 4.

e. Purpose clauses without ut. See Chap. 20, 14, 15.

f. Negative clauses of Purpose after verbs of hindering etc. See Chap. 17, 6-8.

g. After verbs and expressions of Fear, Anxiety, Danger nē is used to introduce an affirmative clause and nē nōn or ut, a negative clause; e. g. vereor nē labōrem augeat, I fear that I shall increase the difficulty; timeō, ut labōrēs sustineat, I fear that you will not endure the troubles, see Chap. 19, 11.

108. Consecutive (Result) Clauses.

a. Pure clauses of Result are introduced by ut, negative ut nōn. LI, 3.

b. Relative clauses of Result are introduced by the relative pronoun (quī) or the relative adverbs (ubi, unde, etc.).

The distinction between the Pure clause of result and the Relative clause is the same as in Purpose clauses, 107, b, Rem.

c. Substantive clauses of Result are Pure clauses (see a above) which have the construction of a substantive. See LXIV, 5.

d. After words of doubt and hindrance, and general negative expressions, result clauses are introduced by quīn (quī nōn) and quōminus (quō [= ut eō] minus); e. g. nūlla fuit civitās quīn mitteret, there was no state which did not send; interclūdōr quōminus plūra dicam, I am prevented from saying more.

109. Relative Clauses of Characteristic. The Subjunctive is used in Relative Clauses to characterize (by modifying, restricting, etc.) the antecedent, especially if the antecedent is general or indefinite, i. e. not otherwise defined, Chap. 27, 7, 8.

Rem. Relative clauses take the Indicative when they qualify by making prominent the fact stated (or denied) of the antecedent, but the Subjunctive if designed to make prominent the character, cause, hindrance, etc. stated in the relative clause.

110. Causal Clauses.

a. Causal clauses (introduced by quod, quia, quoniam, quando) take the Indicative when the cause is given on the authority of the writer or speaker; the Subjunctive is used when the writer or speaker gives the cause on the authority of another, LIII, 5. Cf. Socratēs accūsātus est quod inventūtem corrumperet, Socrates was accused because (as they said) he corrupted the youth.

b. A relative pronoun or adverb introduces a causal clause, when the relative is equivalent to a causal conjunction with a demonstrative pronoun; e. g. fortis puer, quī (cum is) sē dēfendat, brave boy, since he defends himself.

Rem. This is a variety of the Characteristic clause. See 109 above with Rem.

c. The Subjunctive is used with cum causal, to describe the main clause by denoting the cause, LXIII, 3. Cf. quae cum ita sint, since these things are so.

111. Temporal Clauses.

e. Clauses with cum take the Indicative if they merely define the time at which the main act or event took place; they require the Subjunctive (imperfect and pluperfect) if they characterize or describe the situation in which the main act or event took place.

Rem. Cum (at an earlier time quom) is a relative, differing originally from quī only in being restricted to an antecedent denoting the idea of time. This antecedent is some phrase like id tempus, eō tempore, tum, etc., expressed or implied.

The Subjunctive thus used is, in fact, a characterizing Subjunctive (see 109, Rem.) Thus it gives the character of the time at which the main act or event took place, or briefly the situation.

The situation in which an act takes place must, in the majority of cases, necessarily operate as contributing to cause that act or to prevent it. Hence the idea of cause or concession, which originally does not belong to the clause, becomes associated with it (causal or concessive clause of situation).

The use of cum temporal with the Indicative is comparatively rare except with the indefinite sense of whenever.

b. Postquam, ut, ubi, and simul atque are regularly used with the historical perfect or present indicative, in narration.

c. Antequam and priusquam introduce statements of fact in the Indicative, or of acts foreseen and naturally expected in the Subjunctive.

d. Dum, donec, and quoad (while, until) take the Subjunctive if they imply purpose, doubt, or futurity; otherwise they are followed by the Indicative, LVIII, 2.

Rem. The pupil should become familiar with the uses of cum, in order that the force of the word may be recognized at sight. If it is followed immediately by an ablative, it may with caution be inferred that cum is the preposition with. If it stands at the beginning of a clause and no ablative follows it, cum is a conjunction; as such it may define the time of the main clause and take the Indicative, or it may express the situation, either with or without ideas of cause or concession, and take the Subjunctive.

112. Concessive (Although) Clauses.

- a. quamvis, ut, nē, and licet (an impers. verb) take the Subjunctive.
- b. cum concessive takes the Subjunctive, LXXXII, 1.
- c. The relative quī (when used to express concession) takes the Subjunctive.
- d. quamquam introduces what is granted to be a fact and takes the Indicative.
- e. etsī, etiamsī, tametsī (compounds of the conditional conjunction sī) are followed by the Indicative or Subjunctive according to the rules for Conditional clauses. See supplementary lesson I, b-e.

113. Provisional Clauses. Dum, modo, dummodo, indicating a proviso, if only, provided that, take the Subjunctive. The negative is nē; e. g. ōderint, dum metuant, let them hate, if only they fear.

114. Indirect Questions.

- a. A direct question is a question directly asked; e. g. quot annōs nātus es? how many years have you been born (you old are you)? An indirect question is a question that has been incorporated in another sentence, its original structure being so changed, to fit the new sentence, that the question form is lost; e. g. quaesivit quot annōs nātus essem, he asked how old I was (how many years I had been born).
- b. Indirect questions require the Subjunctive. LXXII, 1.

115. Subjunctive Clauses in Indirect Discourse. For the Subjunctive in Subordinate clauses in Indirect discourse see LXX, 3, a. For the Subjunctive for an Imperative clause of Direct discourse see LXX, 3, b. For the Subjunctive for an Interrogative clause of Direct discourse see LXX, 3, c.

116. Subjunctive by Attraction. When a sentence or clause has its verb in the Subjunctive, all clauses subordinate to it regularly take the Subjunctive, being attracted into the mode of the leading verb. This principle is often disregarded when the subordinate verb expresses the notion of fact or certainty. Chap. 27, 5.

117. Conditional Sentences. The classes of conditional Sentences with illustrative examples, are given in supplementary lesson I. The following classification (as preferred by some) may be followed instead of the classification referred to above.

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

Present	{ Simple	Present Indicative.
	{ Contrary to fact	Imperf. Subjunctive.
Past	{ Simple	Past (Imperf. or Perfect) Indicative.
	{ Contrary to fact	Pluperf. Subjunctive.
Future	{ Vivid	Future (Fut. Perf.) Indicative.
	{ Less vivid	Present Subjunctive.

INDIRECT DISCOURSE (ORATIO OBLIQUA)

118. A direct quotation repeats precisely the words of the original speaker or writer; e. g. puer dicit, "eō Rōmam," the boy says, "I am going to Rome." An indirect quotation repeats the thought of the original writer or speaker, but alters the language to suit the structure of the reporter's sentence; puer dicit eē ire Rōmam, the boy says that he is going to Rome. An indirect quotation is thus seen to be the direct object of some verb of saying. He says that he is going. The same grammatical construction follows verbs of thinking, perceiving, knowing, and the like. The name, "Indirect Discourse" (Oratiō Obliqua) is therefore given to this construction whether it is the object of a verb of saying or not.

a. Definition. See LXX, 1.

b. The verb of the principal clause is in the Infinitive, XX, 1; LXX, 2; the Subject in the Accusative.

c. All Subordinate clauses are Subjunctive, LXX, 3 a.

d. Imperative clauses (of Direct discourse) become Subjunctive, LXX, 3 b.

e. Interrogative clauses (of Direct discourse) become Subjunctive, LXX, 3 c.

f. Rhetorical questions (of Direct discourse) become Infinitive, LXX, 3 c.

119. Use of Tenses in Indirect Discourse.

a. The Infinitive Clause will take the Present, Perfect, or Future Infinitive, according as the time denoted is present, past, or future, in relation to the verb of saying (or thinking, etc.).

b. Subjunctive clauses have their tenses determined by the law of Sequence of Tenses (supplementary lesson II) and depend upon the verb of saying. If, however, the perfect infinitive occurs in the declarative clause, the subordinate verb is in the imperfect tense, even though the verb of saying is present; e. g. He says that Caesar sent in order that he might see, dicit Caesarem misisse, ut vidēret. Here vidēret seems to be attracted into a past tense by mīsisse. See examples, Lesson LXX.

INFINITIVE

120. Infinitive as Subject. The Infinitive, either with or without a subject accusative, may be the subject of a verb, Chap. 15, 11-13; hominem mentiri turpe est, for a man to lie is disgraceful.

Used thus, the Infinitive is a substantive, and may, like any substantive, stand also in apposition with the subject of a sentence, or be used as a predicate noun.

121. Infinitive as Object. The Infinitive with subject accusative may be used as Object with verbs of perceiving, knowing, saying, etc. (verba sentiendi et declarandi). This construction gives the Indirect Discourse (118).

122. Complementary Infinitive. Many verbs, such as possum (I am able), audeo (I dare), coepi (I begin), require an Infinitive to complete their meaning. The Infinitive so used is called the Complementary (completing) Infinitive, XXX, 1.

123. Historical Infinitive. The Infinitive is often used in narration with subject nominative, where it is to be translated like the Imperfect (or Perfect) Indicative. Used thus, it is called the Historical Infinitive, Chap. 16, 2.

Rem. This may be explained as a complementary Inf. depending on some verb easily supplied from the connection.

PARTICIPLES

124. The Participle is a verbal adjective, governing the same cases as the verb. The time represented is present, past, or future, with reference to the main verb of the clause.

- a. For inflection see iēns, App. 9; oriēns, XV; prūdēns, Chart II.
- b. Present Participle=Relative clause, Chap. 25, 20.
- c. Perfect Participle=Relative clause, XLVI.
- d. Perfect=Conditional clause, XLIV, 3.
- e. Perfect as co-ordinate clause, L, 8.
- f. Perfect with habere, Chap. 15, 3, 4.
- g. Perfect as temporal clause, Chap. 28, 2, 3.
- h. Future Participle with sum (Active Periphrastic), XXXVIII, 1.

GERUND AND GERUNDIVE

125. The Gerund is a verbal noun of the Second declension, neuter, found in the oblique cases of the singular only, XXV, 1. As a noun it is governed by another word, as a verb it governs other words, XXXII, 4 a.

126. The Gerundive is the future passive participle and, like all participles, has the syntax of an adjective agreeing with (not governing) another word, XXXII, 4 b. For the Gerundive denoting purpose see LXXV, 2. For the Gerundive with sum forming the Passive Periphrastic conjugation see LIX, 5.

SUPINE

127. The Supine is a verbal noun (of the fourth declension) with an active meaning, used only in the accusative and ablative.

128. The Accusative of the Supine is used:

- a. With iri to form the future passive infinitive.
- b. With verbs of motion to express purpose, LXIX, 1.

129. The Ablative of the Supine is used as an Ablative of Specification, chiefly with the adjectives facilis, difficilis, honestus, turpis, crēdibilis, incrēdibilis, mīrābilis, optimus, and a few others; and with the nouns fās, nefās, opus, XXXVIII, 2.

LATIN-ENGLISH VOCABULARY.

This vocabulary, briefly defining each word employed in the text of the Helvetian war, is designed mainly as an index to words more fully treated in the special vocabularies which accompany each lesson.

In compound words prefixes are separated by a hyphen. The definitions given will enable the student easily to determine whether the prefix in- is the negative particle or the preposition meaning on, against, over, etc.

The declension can be distinguished by the termination of the genitive singular. The figures 1, 2, 4, placed after the first form of a verb indicate that the principal parts are formed just as in the model verbs amō, moneō, audiō. When a figure does not thus indicate the verb to be regular and all the principal parts are not given, it will be understood that those not given are rarely if ever found. The perfect passive participle, and not the supine, is employed as the last of the principal parts because the formation of the compound tenses of the passive voice is thus more easily explained, and also because, as has been shown, in a large proportion of Latin verbs, no supine is found. Roman numerals placed after the definitions indicate the lesson where the word is more fully treated. The references in bold-faced Arabic numerals are to chapters. The mastery of words given as they occur in the preceding lessons should make frequent reference to this vocabulary unnecessary.

For abbreviations see page 16.
